The Traveller, Family Journal,

TIMES AND LIFE IN NEW-YORK — SPIRIT OF THE TIMES

BY FISHER & INMAN. 20 NASSAU-STREET, AT $3 PER ANN. IN ADVANCE.

SATURDAY EVENING, AUGUST 31, 1833.

VOL. II.....WHOLE No 144. F "THE TRAVELLER" & "SPIRIT OF THE TIMES"

Sporting Intelligence

CANVASS BACK DUCKS.

Toling on the Waters of the Chesapeake.—Toling begins when the ducks first appear in the shoves, in the early part of the season, and is practised in this manner:—An active dog that is trained to run after stones is started from behind a hand, by throwing for him on the shore, near the edge of the water, whilst the gunner lays concealed. The dog should be kept constantly in rapid motion, and all the time in sight of the sinks—bounding over the rocks and flourishing his lusty tail; but he must not bark, for that would frighten them. As soon as the ducks see the dog playing on the shore, they stretch out their necks in amazement; and by a sort of unconscious movement towards him with a vacant stare, as if they were spell-bound." This sport is very liable to interruption: if they see a boat or a man, or another dog, or any living thing besides the toler, they will swim or fly away—They must see but the one attracting object; as soon as their attention is divided the charm is broken, and they become sensible of their danger. If two dogs be started to tole together, the ducks will fly. They will frequently come to a colored handkerchief, or flag, waved on the end of a pole; but the dog must not be in sight when the flag is shown, or he will destroy the effect of it. The young duck will never saw a dog before are more easily toled, and the old ones in the same flock know them. Sometimes a dozen or less leave a large flock and swim in; but frequently the whole flock, consisting of many hundreds. Individuals will sometimes be to have a fair view of the dog, come drawing almost in a tumultuous manner; those on the outside flying and lighting before those nearest, and strive to get shore first. The flock is kept in an uproar by the successive flight of those actually thrown in the front, until all get near enough to take a fair view of the fatal show. This, however, is not the usual manner of toling. I have several times seen them come in this style, but they generally swim in without flying. It is a critical picture when the ducks are coming: the gunner is hunkered in the dog should prove intractable and spoil the shot. Toe toler [dog] pays no attention to the ducks when he is first started, because they are then 100 or 500 yards off; but as soon as they approach near he begins to caper less and less about the gunner, and at last lies down in him, occasionally whining and casting longing looks at the ducks. It now requires all the art and authority of the master (who must speak loud, nor show himself, but direct the dog by waving his hand) to keep him in the lowest degree quiet, which cannot always be done; for instinct often overcomes the best training. It frequently happens that the dog refuses to run, after the ducks come within sixty or eighty yards of him; but stops to look at them. There he stands, with a spaniel-like stupidity, his head down and his tail—fishing for fore feet and whining with anxiety, as he looks first at the ducks and then at the gunner, expecting him to fire. The impatience of the dog often compels the gunners to fire before the ducks are within shot; and if two or three, then they might have slaughtered them by dozens, if the dog had continued playing. The dogs that are trained to tole should never be suffered to bring the dead ducks out of the water; they will seldom play long enough after they have mouthed the ducks and lick their blood. As the dog can never be taught to know the ducks are attracted by his playing, he cannot always be made to continue it after the ducks come near enough to engage his attention. There are generally two or more gunners in the same hunk; and when an accident happens, and the dog runs as he ought to do, the ducks are brought within a few yards of the shore, and the dog is manœuvred so as to huddle them together. No one moves until he that plays the dog turns his back shore; and the other is to fire at the first he sees ample time to take aim, and pronounces the word fire. Then every gun pours a shower of shot on that part of the flock opposite to it. A scene of confusion ensues: the gunners are all wet to the waist, and covered with gore, dying in a pitiful way with their blood: whilst the cripples are flapping and diving about in every direction. Before the shooters have time to get upon their feet, the water dogs having rushed out of the blind, some of them are bringing the dead to the shore, and others are swimming after the wounded. Great numbers are killed by this strategem. I have seen as many as forty-two canvas-backs and red heads killed by three simultaneous discharges, besides fifteen wounded, that were dived off upon by hunters. I have seen a party of three gunners to kill seventy-six ducks, at three shots a piece, one morning, and the next, ninety-five at four shots. I have heard of larger numbers being killed, but never saw it. I have seen the same flock of ducks toled three times in the same day, and shot at each time; but this does not often occur. They get very shy after they have been decoyed a few times, and will fly at the sight of a dog. The canvas-back, red head and black head, are easily toled; but there are several kinds of ducks that never have been known to tole. The best time of the day to from sunrise till nine o'clock in the morning, but I have seen them toled every hour of the day; and they will come to a white dog or flag by moonlight.

T. of Reg.

A FEW COMMENTS ON THE RACING THIS SPRING.

Extract from a Letter

Fortune has this spring, scattered her favors with something like an even hand. Messrs. Selden, Botts, Davis, and others, have partaken of her bounty. Success has rarely been so much in the favorites—but in fact, I believe, the winners have many a two-races during the whole campaign. Of the unusual number of competitors, but three have exceeded that number (and, in many instances, too, the favourites have been equally defeated; as Mary Randolph, at the Union Course; O'Neill, at Poughkeepsie; Sodoski, at Trenton; at the Central Course; Flying Dutchman, at Newmarket; Mickleejohn, at Norfolk; and Patrico, at Fairfield and Lynchburg.

The winners that have won most frequently than once, for this spring, racing in Virginia, District of Columbia, Maryland and New York, are as follows: Ironsides, four times; Dolly Dixon, three; Medley colt, out of Betsey Robinson, three; and Tarbaby, Flying Dutchman, Black Maria, Muckleejohn and Monsoon, twice each. I remember none other that has won more than a single race during the campaign. I do not refer to the minor courses or several sale "cattle. —Sumter's Turf Register.

Strange the Truth.—Two years ago, it had appeared but a thing of Texas fever, not to come. In a family at the west end of the city, lives an honest Irish woman, for the purpose of attending a dilatory work. She was directed on the first afternoon of her residence, to toil the Tea-kettle, a very common phrase, in this city, I believe. After waiting a long time and no sign of Tea, Mrs ——— went in to ascertain why the delay—when lo! the Tea-kettle was being a boiling, been put upon a large pot, and a washing—but it stayed with a great fire could possibly endure the effect. What are you about Pats? Why I am doing what you did me to do—Boiling the Tea-kettle.

The organ of early destructiveness sometimes exhibits itself in a droll way. The mother of a family was the other day saying, that as soon as the youngest child was of such an age, she should break up the nursery. "Let mama" exclaime of the children "that will be fine sport—I'll break up the chairs, and John shall break up the tables."

Miscellaneous.

COUGHS AND COLDS.—It is now about one year since the NEW ENGLAND COUGH SYRUP was first offered to the public; during which time some of these well bottles have been opened in Europe and the United States and the Brazils; in addition to which, where the directions have been strictly followed by those who used it, the most satisfactory results have been produced and in the multitude of cases it has been recommended to be a certain remedy for Influenza, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Spitting of Blood, and all affections of the lungs.

The proprietors are at liberty to refer to many individuals of the first respectability, who have been cured of obstinate coughs by its use, and the following letters received by them are inclosed, for the perusal of those who may be troubled with similar complaints.

Gentlemen—After having tried by the recommendation of my friends, almost every medicine for a cough, without the least relief, I feel desirous to say, with much thankfulness, that it has cured me of one of the most obstinate coughs I ever knew, and shall feel it my duty to recommend it to every one whom I find in need of such a valuable medicine.

Signed,—Yours respectfully,

JOHN P. STEVENS.

The very great benefit that I have derived from the use of your Syrup has induced me to avail myself of them, and beg to acquaint you that he has removed from his late residence, 66 chamber street to 235 Broadway, next door to the American Hotel, where he has fitted up at great expense, an establishment upon a most splendid scale, and is determined that nothing shall be wanting on his part to merit a continuance of past favors. His stock of cloths is selected with the greatest care from the best manufactories in the West of England. A choice variety of Cassimeres, Tailoretts, Valentias, and fancy silks of the newest patterns always on hand. The subscriber pledges himself that for fashionable style of fitting and good workmanship he is not to be surpassed either in Europe or America.

JAS. M'CARTHY MURPHY.

March 9 Merchant Tailor.

OLD GALEN'S HEAD DISPENSARY. No. 14 Peck Slip, corner of Water street.—DR. EVANS continues his improved practice as usual, at his well established Dispensary, No. 14 Peck slip. The public are respectfully apprised, that Dr. Evans being regularly educated in the city of London, has been a member of said faculty 27 years—has had 12 years hospital practice and is well known as a practitioner in this city for the last 16 years. His great success attending Dr. E's practice in all the acute diseases of the Lungs, Throat, Pleurisy, &c. &c. &c. has drawn upon him the envy of his competitors, who are now endeavoring to copy after him. Many valuable members of society are daily falling victims to the rapid fatal results of the quackery and empiricism of inexperienced practitioners. Strangers are particularly cautioned not to be deceived by numerous puffing advertisements of any description, but call and judge for themselves. Also, for the last 10 years, Dr. Evans's Cough Syrup, containing a complete plan of medicine for the cure of a certain disease, with a small book of directions, in which the symptoms and treatment of the disease are described at full length, and with which every thing that every person may in this case become his own physician.

N.B. A preventive for the above, if used in the time, is worth a guinea. The offices and entrances are well arranged, and secrecy may be depended on. mch 23

HARP.

J. J. TRUST, pupil of N. C. BOCHSA, tenders his grateful acknowledgements to his patrons for their support last season, and begs to inform the public, that he has now re-commenced giving lessons on this popular instrument. As a gentleman of his competency as a Teacher, he takes the liberty to direct the attention of parents to the names of the following distinguished individuals, to whom he has the honor and permission to refer:—John M'Tavish, Esq. of Baltimore; John Inskeep, Esq. of New York; Esq. of Philadelphia; Jas. Buchanan, Esq. of do.; D. Lynch, Esq. of do.; N. Prime, Esq. of do.; G. Bates, Esq. do. do. H. J. T. also gives instructions on the Guitar and Piano Fortes and accompanies the Harp, Piano, &c. &c. by the Music TRESTS. Terms, &c. apply at Broadway, 3 doors above Canal.

FEMALE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE, AT MIDDLETOWN, CONN. Pres.—The system of instruction pursued at this Seminary, embraces a thorough course of English and Classical reading, with the different branches of the sciences, equivalent to the instruction of a liberal and finished education. While this most rational system will be devoted to the inculcation of correct habits, both mental and personal, it will also be the constant aim of the Principal, both by precept and example, to furnish to their pupils the knowledge and practice of the duties, moral, social, and religious.

The Subscriber feels that this place are better adapted for a respectable boarding school, than the village of Belleville. Situated on the banks of the Passaic, about 9 miles from the city of New York, on the road to Newark—it is one of the first rate salubrity, and possessing three places of worship, on the Episcopal, Presbyterian, and Methodist denominations, it combines the advantages of a country residence, with the convenience of a high character, and a situation uncommonly picturesque and salubrious.

JOHN P. CATHERINE.
MARIA M. CATHERINE, Principals.

REFERENCES.

In New York—Rt. Rev. Benjamin T. Onderdonk, D. D.; Rev. John M. Wainwright, D. D.; Rev. Jas. Matthews, D. D.; Nathaniel Bowditch, LL. D. Professor of Languages in Columbian College; Philip Hone, Esq.; Stephen Cambreling, Esq.

In Belleville—Rev. Jas. Carnahan, D. D.; Anthony Rutgers, Esq.; James L. Morris, Esq.; S. L. Ward, M. D.; Lt. George C. Wheeler U. S. Engineers.

TERMS

Board and Tuition in the English branches, $45, per quarter; Latin and Greek Languages, each $5, do.; Drawing, Painting, and the different kinds of fancy Needle-work, each $5, do.; Instrumental Music and French Language, each $5, do.; Music, and Dancing, at the prices charged by the teachers of those branches, respectively.

Each school will provide her own bed and bedding.

DAY SCHOLARS—English branches, full course, $35; Languages, and ornamental branches, same as above; Fuel for the season, $2. 12 weeks constitute a quarter, and no deduction will be made, except for protracted sickness.

There will be a vacation of 1 weeks in the month of August, and should any pupil remain at the Institute during that time, an additional charge of $2.50 per week, will be made.

No pupil will be permitted to leave, without at least 6 weeks notice. Payment, in all cases, must be made in advance.

Feb 16

POWELL'S BALSAM OF ANNISEED FOR COUGHS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, ASTHMAS, &c.

UNDER the immediate patronage of several of the most distinguished Nobility and Gentry in the United Kingdom, such as Britain, Scotland and Ireland, in bottles at 2s 9d and 4s 6d.

This invaluable Medicine has the extraordinary property of immediately relieving one the coughs, however stiffly obstinate, and breaking up the phlegm, it operates by dissolving the concretions of Phlegm, consequently, causing a free expectoration. Those who are troubled with hoarseness in the throat, which obstructs the free utterance of the voice, will find it a certain remedy. Numerous testimonies from the Professors of Dublin College, where it has been extensively used for the last 12 years, and are fully satisfied of its efficacy in the cure of Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Spitting of Blood, and all affections of the lungs.

The proprietors are at liberty to refer to many individuals of the first respectability, who have been cured of obstinate coughs by its use, and the following letters received by them are inclosed, for the perusal of those who may be troubled with similar complaints.

Gentlemen—After having tried by the recommendation of my friends, almost every medicine for a cough, without the least relief, I feel desirous to say, with much thankfulness, that it has cured me of one of the most obstinate coughs I ever knew, and shall feel it my duty to recommend it to every one whom I find in need of such a valuable medicine.

Signed,—Yours respectfully,

JOHN P. STEVENS.

The very great benefit that I have derived from the use of your Syrup has induced me to avail myself of them, and beg to acquaint you that he has removed from his late residence, 66 chamber street to 235 Broadway, next door to the American Hotel, where he has fitted up at great expense, an establishment upon a most splendid scale, and is determined that nothing shall be wanting on his part to merit a continuance of past favors. His stock of cloths is selected with the greatest care from the best manufactories in the West of England. A choice variety of Cassimeres, Tailoretts, Valentias, and fancy silks of the newest patterns always on hand. The subscriber pledges himself that for fashionable style of fitting and good workmanship he is not to be surpassed either in Europe or America.

JAS. M'CARTHY MURPHY.

March 9 Merchant Tailor.

OLD GALEN'S HEAD DISPENSARY. No. 14 Peck Slip, corner of Water street.—DR. EVANS continues his improved practice as usual, at his well established Dispensary, No. 14 Peck slip. The public are respectfully apprised, that Dr. Evans being regularly educated in the city of London, has been a member of said faculty 27 years—has had 12 years hospital practice and is well known as a practitioner in this city for the last 16 years. The great success attending Dr. E's practice in all the acute diseases of the Lungs, Throat, Pleurisy, &c. &c. &c. has drawn upon him the envy of his competitors, who are now endeavoring to copy after him. Many valuable members of society are daily falling victims to the rapid fatal results of the quackery and empiricism of inexperienced practitioners. Strangers are particularly cautioned not to be deceived by numerous puffing advertisements of any description, but call and judge for themselves. Also, for the last 10 years, Dr. Evans's Cough Syrup, containing a complete plan of medicine for the cure of a certain disease, with a small book of directions, in which the symptoms and treatment of the disease are described at full length, and with which every person may in this case become his own physician.

N.B. A preventive for the above, if used in the time, is worth a guinea. The offices and entrances are well arranged, and secrecy may be depended on. mch 23

DR. DE GOURGUES'S PATENT SPECIFIC.

This medicine has been used with great success as the remedy for Venereal Disease, in all its stages and forms, which, in one or three days, has effected a cure, without the least exposure, or hindrance from business. Persons who have tried other remedies, and have failed, will find this a certain remedy. Price $1 per bottle, with a pamphlet containing full directions, accompanying each phial.

WM. D. DISPEROM,
New York, Aug. 3, 1829. Broadway, near Leonard st.

I have great satisfaction in recommending "De Gourgues's Patent Specific," considering it a very valuable medicine, having been in the habit of using it for the last three years. In a severe attack of gonorrhœa, without a change of diet, or the least exposure of the use of my limbs, so much so that I could not put my foot to the floor or raise my knee—I was induced to try the Specific, and was so much relieved, that the next day I was enabled to walk out, and was perfectly recovered, from the use of one bottle. I have also used it with the great efficacy for bubos, buboes, sciatica, &c. &c. in my family.

Jan. 22, 1832. Corner 1st Avenue and 10th st.

I was badly afflicted with a violent and continual pain in my head, for about nine years; the last two years it was so severe that I could not sleep. I had consulted several eminent physicians, and tried various remedies, but they, however, failed to give me relief. I accidentally tried "De Gourgues's Patent Specific," which, I must say, has done me perfectly cured me in a short time. I keep the medicine constantly in my family, and use it for various purposes, and recommend it highly to all friends.

ABRAHAM PARCELLS.
Inspector of Pleasure Carriages.

New York 13th August, 1832. dec 23 m

THE NEW-YORK TRAVELLER, AND SPIRIT OF THE TIMES, IS PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY EVENING, AT No. 1 Tribune Building, Nassau-st. BY FISHER & INMAN.

CONDITIONS OF subscription.—THE TRAVELLER is published every week, in quarter sheets, at $3 per annum, payable in advance. Four copies will be sent to one address for $10 in advance. Payment, when bills are given out, will be charged at the rate of three dollars and fifty cents. No paper discontinued but by order of the publishers, nor to any person who may be in arrears for the publication, or to any other than the quarter sheet pay for about in advance.

Agents.—Advertisements received and promptly inserted on moderate terms.

BURNETT & SR 1st Princess, 17 Ann street

Turf Matters.

FALL RACES.

We have already stated that there are to be two Meetings this fall: the first of which will last four or five days, commencing on the 1st October. A great variety of Sweepstakes and Matches are be ——— made up among some first rate horses, so that great sport is to be looked for, independantly of the two, three, and four mile days.

The Match of the Northern Colt "Niagara" belonging to Mr. John C. Stevens, and the Southern Colt "Cadet" owned by Col. Johnson, will take place on the first day, for $1000 a side—four miles out. There is a Sweepstake made up of four subscribers—two mile heats—$400 entrance. In this stake "Stark," the victor of the deceased Medas, will meet "Jessup," the Southern Colt, who was matched to run against that his promising colt for $10,000. There is now no doubt that this interesting trial of skill between the North and South will take place in this sweepstakes, unless one or both shall be withdrawn to make a Stake of larger amount, which will of course only increase the contention.

It is almost impossible to give any distinct idea at this time, of what matches will take place, as stakes are not unfrequently made up on the very evening before the Race—but we understand that a negotiation is now going on for a Match of scarcely less interest than that of the celebrated Henry and Eclipse. Good sport, we are certain of, and the lovers of the Turf will do well to take a peep at our Fall Races.

CENTRAL COURSE.

FALL RACES

In our advertising columns will be found the Bill of Fare for this meeting, which will commence on Tuesday the 15th October. There will be four days Racing, and from the value of the Purses and the number of prominent Nags about to contend for them, there is no doubt of excellent sport.

THE STUD BOOK

This work is now printed, and will be ready for delivery in a very few days. To the Turfman and breeder of Horses it is a book of the utmost value, where, at a single glance, the whole pedigree of any horse can be ascertained with ease and certainty.—We were never more convinced of the worth, nay, the absolute necessity of such a book of reference than on finding a sporting friend at fault a few days since, for the dam of one of the most celebrated mares that ever ran upon our Course; although he can usually trace the blood of any known Nag to the length of a Welchman's Pedigree, and none of the Registers at present published could inform him. The plan of the work, and the address to the public with which it opens, are emanations from an illustrious Statesman, now deceased, whose love and care of his stock were almost equal to the eccentricity of his singularly gifted mind.

Nearly all the pedigrees are attested by the owners or breeders of the horses, and any deficiency has been supplied by the most industrious search, among the proofs and records of former proprietors. In the utility of such a work, every one who has had occasion to trace back a single pedigree, will readily concur, and for the accuracy of its details, as well as the excellence of its arrangements, the industrious compiler, Mr. Edgar, possesses the vouchers and recommendations of some of the most distinguished Turfmen in the United States. They are inserted in the preface to the work, and we cordially join their writers in recommending it as a book of the utmost utility to every sportsman in the country.

TROTTING COURSE.

While this section of the country has so much reason to be proud of its trotting Horses, it has been a matter of serious regret to all who admire this useful and exciting sport that so much room should be given to doubt the performances even of our best Horses, from the uncertainty attending the variations in all our Trotting Courses—some exceeding the mile, but many more falling far short of it,—so that some first rate trotters have never had justice done to them, while many secondary Nags have had the spurious reputation of doing their mile in 2, 45 or 2, 50 who in the course were in a just length would not come within 3 minutes.

This observation, we are delighted to find is about to be done away with at the Centreville Course,—the proportion of which has now extended his track to one and complete mile and the accounts of the trotting that will take place out at that Course, there can be considered the only certain record of the true speed of the Horses.

NEW HACK COURSE.

We learn from the Turf Register that L. S. Gaston, Esq. of "Norfolk, Va" is establishing a New Hack Course, about eleven miles from Baltimore, by the Ohio Rail Road. The races begin the week after those at the Central Course, which follows immediately on the finish of our first Meeting, and as there are only three weeks to elapse between the end of our first, and the commencement of our second meeting, the month of October will be unusually filled sporting events.

Dear laughs Curiosity.—On Wednesday last, a person in one of the papers, who had to come from Paterson N. J. to join some sporting materials, and of course, was provided with a tandem in the shape of two little spirit the Five Points, a place at which he had heard so much from his acquaintance when I advised viewed anthem. Of course, the prime mover of the business of entertainment is just to start, and tell him a conversation with a very interesting female, with whom he took a social glass of rum, for which, with the accustomed hospitality and politeness of the landlord that part of the city, he was not allowed to pay, she shelling out the twelve cents. Suffice it to say, the man tell asleep, and on showing not morning, found himself locked completely out of doors, with his pocket lightened of $240 in cash, and a gold watch of the value of another cost hundred. By the aid of a Police officer, he subsequently recovered the latter, and had the girl arrested, but the other trifle was not forever to him.—Standard.

English pride.—A late English paper, in giving an account of a ball lately given to the King and Queen by the Duke and Duchess of Brucleugh gives "the company began to arrive at four o'clock, and formed an interminable line of carriages of a mile in length."

FAITHLESS ANNA.

Miss Blowsabella Anna Jones,
She fell in love one day,
So went down on her marrow bones,
And thus began to pray.

"Oh long may I my true love love,
Long may my love love me!
She pray'd so long she could not move,
The cramp came in her knee.

But love's a most uncertain thing,
And can't be trusted to;
For when he'd bought the wedding ring,
Miss Blowzy proved untrue.

Now this poor fellow did depart
All by a sudden death;
And if it wer'nt of a broken heart,
It were for want of breath.

Some say he'd used her ill of late,
Some say she'd used him worse:
She pawned the ring—the duplicate,
And change were in her purse.

Her conscience made her very silk,
She took unto her bed;
Her cold feet on a good warm brick,
A night cap on her head.

The air was raw and frosty too,
The cold it nipped her nose;
And so (as you or I would do,)
The poor girl death the clothes.

A Ghost there came to her bedside,
A monster tall and grim;
But when he looked, she turned her head,
And would not look at him.

A frog upon each eyebrow sat,
A lizard on his chin;
And 'tween his teeth th' head of a rat,
Kept popping out and in.

His eyes they glared, and looked so fell,
They set the bed on fire;
Miss Blowzy tried to ring the bell
But could nt pull the wire.

A string of dead dew-worms were tied,
Around his scraggy brow;
Says he "I come to claim my bride,
Because she broke her vow."

She screamed and wept at what he said,
But found it all in vain;
So laid herself upon the bed,
And went to sleep again!

SHAKSPEARE IN SCOTLAND.

Curious Relic.—It has hitherto been supposed by Shakspeare's annotators, though with no great confidence, that that great man must have been among the number of the English Players Elizabeth sent to entertain her cousin King James of Scotland, and which is known to have exhibited before that Monarch at Perth, in the year 1600. Sir John Stuelan, in a letter written nearly sixty years ago—for so singular an antiquarian author—and which may be found somewhere entombed in his famous Statistical Account, employs much in genuine argument to show the probability of this conjecture, chiefly insisting that the poet must have paid a visit to Dunsinane Hill on one occasion, and acquired a minute and correct knowledge of the localities of that region as he displays in Macbeth. We are fortunately enabled by the kindness of a correspondent, to make a decisive settlement of this point of poet's life, by producing a leaf from a MS. poem to Drummond, of Hawthornden, in which it is made plain that Shakspeare at least visited Edinburgh. He of the "learned sock," it is well known, visited Scotland in 1603, partly, we believe, for the purpose of seeing the Queen of Elizabeth's Court, but it will be remembered that Jonson's father was of the Johnstone's of Annandale, and partly that he might pay a visit to his friend Drummond, at Hawthornden. The letter was then written. The curious relic must be looked upon as also contributing a mite to the history of the drama in Scotland, for which the matter is so lamentably meagre:—

"master Vid

"quhen we were drinking at my Lordis on Sonday you promised yat you would gett for me my Lordis coppie he lent you of my lord Sempill his interlinde callit phiotras and quhich Vill Shaksperare told me he saw acted in edinburrh toun quhen he was yar wi the players to his great contentment and delightie

"my man waits your answer to give him the playe
and lette him awaye
To your sworrd friend
and (Signed) BEN JONSON.

"From my lodgeing in ye cannongait
Much the twelft 1619
(Addressed)
"To my very good friend
the lardie of Hawthorne—den
Vyse"

DESCRIPTION OF THE "KINGDOM" OF CONNAUGHT

This interesting portion of the British Empire both, says an intelligent traveller, under a dark grey cloud which seems to overhang the land of the earth, but like the widow's cruse, is never exhausted. It is bounded on the south by Christendom and partial Tipperary, on the north by Donegal, and on the west by the Sad Sea. It abounds in bogs, lakes, and other natural curiosities; the soil consists of equal quantities of earth and stones; and its surface so admirably disencumbered of trees, shrubs, hedges and ditches, that an intelligent backwoodsman from Louisiana was heard to declare with rapture, that it was the prettiest place for a cock fight in the world. Its gentry are a polished and religious race, remarkable for their punctuality in pecuniary transactions, and their freedom from a litigious or quarrelsome disposition. The prevailing mode of belief among the upper classes is Anglico-Gallican, the other people prefer Popery. The town of Ballinadee is seated on a river, the name of which I neglected to inquire. It is much frequented by saints and cattle-dealers, are ten in a lively trade in sheep and pressers, and tailors and bailiffs are thick as leaves in Vallombrosa. The calons, moreover, are wholesaled—pigs and pupery are prohibited—and travellers waxing on the seventh day denounced, and under penalty of amercements enjoined to take their ease in their respective inns."

Something like a bull.—The Philadelphia Gazette speaks of the increasing shortness of the days. This is something like that of the Virginia expression monstrous little; and they are both like the description given of a very small horse, which in comparison with another one referred to, was said to be as little as two of him.

HOLE HOURS.

Characters of newspapers

How much character there is in the superficial aspect of a newspaper! Reserve, dignity, pomp of its editor, physiognomy and craniology, on every page. The tomes of a large man or a little man, a tall man or a short man, is limned with each sheet; and taking upon one of those hebdomadals, the figure of its editor rises before us as distinct as if he were not three feet off. Aye, do what man will, Mutsuccup Gossipquill—he forbidden, forbid of humanity—thou art seen and known; thy shamefulness and oddities, thy quiet humanities, thy modest habits, even thy phiz, is circulated with every sheet thy carrier distributes. There is a sort of impersonality in the affair, no need of taking pen, portraits or miniatures of that portion of the human race yclept editors; no need of biographies or autobiographies;—only turn over your pocket papers, reader, and take a general introduction to the corporate editorial.

First comes a huge, clear printed sheet—the large tome! Its dazzling well in the world. Its mammoth long and polished—not pensed as it has had been interrupted in the perpetuities of business. Some blunders in typography, one more a mangled wrong, and one little turn-away regular turbine on a hard bodkin, but not always in this—and not afraid of criticism. A middle sized, portly, gentlemanly-looking personage, dressed in black well brushed coat and a well turned hat, and no sign of the needful in his pocket!

Take up the large, long, clear sheet; filled with advertisements. Now the man looks to the probable. No long speech made in politics, no one sentiment that sole—no congress—a minute of few pages, and "to be continued" at the end—no case to be decided. Aye, and no Foreign Intelligence! Wot wares now many emperors turn over, how many armies turned, and how many kings are turned out!—he takes care of his own little empire, is an upper, and let that only flourish in peace and in purity! the world may wag as it will. Take up the little sheet, dark, dull, dawdling man, with an air and soul down turns to the right or left. He has a wife, has to share his earthly cares and joys, and, in a word, he must have his fellow and the right sort of one. When ever a man of any sense finds his worthy affinity given him, he begins to look to his wife, his wife, and his grandsire, upon man has one recommendation—it is always half so can; she rather contraves to mind matters, or she puts the sticking stroke to rum, and other ways—

He put to sink beneath the shock
Than insolder pieces an upper tack.

That next editor must be a bachelor. His little pernicious is so superfluous printed, so fantastically embellished, with humorous and trivial, so unsolemn, so letters misplaced, no wheels, no flourishing under the head of editors, for the devil transferred to the altar of Hymen. He evidently has no wife; for a bad one would distract him with her clamor and turmoil, and a good one would only aim his business, and he would be ruined in all by his sole love. It has some especial advantages, too, over all feminine appendages; it is neither obtrusive nor loquacious. Does it not wear whatever gals he pleases to put on, and is it not greater or gay, kind or severe, at his bidding? Does it not sometimes unwillingly annoyance, or lay to out or drive.

As many men differ from each other, but by trifling qualities, so between many newspapers the shades of distinction are light, there is scarcely a single one, that is not a tolerably married gent, or only read. Look at that little corner, crayon, clearly a single man, with letters huge enough, for a man in a cupboard, as if meant for the blind to read!—Poor Life! no! see the finger and thumb touching the wind and the pen, and the ink-horn, and the pen, and the modern magazines. A genuine little gentleman. All the upper part is power, the little paper is decorated to make. What a table that editor must be—a short, small table, with a very big inkstand near the window gazing at the sky, and the pen in the wind always blown a gale. Humanities number among his hoisted shades some half a dozen shoulders, whose ambitions and aspirations are his empires by practising in the modern Babel—the Dunsinane Hill of the Scotch Poet, and the

SWALLOW BARN.

It has been truly said that he that is robbed not knowing of his loss, is no loser at all: we suppose that the converse of the proposition is equally verifiable. If so, accident and a leisure moment have suddenly made us rich; we have had Swallow Barn in our possession for the space of some odd years, months and days, without a thought of its value, or once dreaming of putting to use the treasures wherein it abounds. But perhaps some of our readers are not exactly aware of the nature of Swallow Barn; it is a book gentle friend; one of the choicest, richest, merriest and most capital of all possible books. It is an American, or to speak more by the card, a Virginian Sketch-book. Swallow Barn is the cognomen of an Estate somewhere within fifty or sixty miles of Richmond, and the contents of these volumes are just the humours and goings-on of the inhabitants, and some of their neighbors. It is equal to Irving in every thing except polish and pathos; the forte of the author is humor; the oddities of his characters are of the very first brand, and he tells of their sayings and doings with an irresistible gravity and sedateness. He has created a host of delightful beings whom we love with an affection like that which we bestow upon Domine Sampson, and Dugald Dalgetty, and Die Vernon, and Oldbuck, and Caleb Balderstone. From the moment of their introduction, we are sworn friends, and travel along together merrily with a smile on our lip, and fun of the very first water dancing along every vein, till the last page of the second volume is turned, and we are ready to growl at the author for not giving us more. By the way, we have heard that his pen not idle, and that we may look for another treat in the course of the coming winter or spring. Be it so; he shall be heartily welcome.

We have copied a chapter, by way of a specimen; and after devouring it, we trust that none of our readers will think meanly of our advice; to wit, that they put themselves forthwith in motion, and buy, beg, borrow, or steal SWALLOW BARN.

MY GRAND UNCLE.

My grand uncle Edward Hazard, the father of Walter, was from all accounts, a man of an active speculating turn. He was always busy in schemes to improve his estate, and, it is said, threw away a great deal of money by way of bettering his fortune. He was a gentleman who had spent a considerable portion of his life in England, and when he settled himself, at last, in possession of his patrimony at Swallow Barn, he was filled with magnificent projects, which, tradition says, to hear him explain, would have satisfied any man, to a mathematical demonstration, that with the expenditure of a few thousand pounds, Swallow Barn would have risen one hundred per cent in value. He was a very authoritative man also, in the province I belonged frequently to the House of Burgesses; and was more than once, in the privy council. The family now look up to my grand uncle Edward, as one of the most distinguished individuals of the stock and take a great deal of pride in his importance: they say he was a most astonishing rake in London, and a wonderful speaker in the provincial legislature.

Connected with these two developements of his character, there are two portraits of him at Swallow Barn. One represents him in an embroidered coat without a cape, a highly worked cravat, tied tight enough about his neck to choke him, which makes his eyes seem to start from their sockets; an inordinately bedizened waistcoat, satin small-clothes, silk stockings, and large buckles in his shoes. His complexion is of the most effeminate delicacy, and his wig seems to form a white downy cushion for a small fringed cocked-hat. By the portrait, he could not have been much above twenty years of age; and his air is prodigiously conceited. The second picture exhibits only his bust. It presents a gentleman with a fine, bluff, and somewhat waggish face, past the meridian of life, arrayed in brown, with the oratorical expression of one about to make a speech.

Now it must be made known, that the tract of land, called the Brakes, belonging to the Tracy family, lies adjacent to Swallow Barn. In old times the two estates were divided by a small stream that emptied into the James River, and that is still known by the name of the Apple-pie Branch. This rivulet traverses a range of low grounds for some miles, occasionally spreading itself out into morasses, which were formerly, and in some places are now, overgrown with thickets of arrow-wood, nine-bark, and various other shrubs, the growth of this region. The main channel of the stream through these tangled masses, was generally distinct enough to be traced as a boundary line, although the marsh extended some distance from each bank. In the course of this stream there is one point where the higher ground of the country stretches in upon the bed of the marsh, from either side, so as to leave a gorge of about a hundred yards in width. from both of which eminences the spectator may look back upon the low lands of the swamp for nearly a mile.

Just at that period of the life of my grand uncle when his fever of improvement had risen to its crisis, and when he was daily creating immense fortunes,—in his dreams,—it struck him, upon looking at the gorge I have described, that with very little trouble and expense, he might throw a stout breastwork from one side to the other, and have as fine a mill-dam as any man could possibly desire. It was so simple an operation that he was surprised it had never occurred to him before. And then a flour mill might be erected a short distance below, which would cost but a trifle,—and the inevitable result would be that this unprofitable tract of waste land would thereupon become the most valuable part of the estate.

I am told that it belonged to the character of my grand uncle to fall absolutely in love with every new project. He turned this one over in his mind for two or three nights: and it became as clear to him as daylight, that he was to work wonders with his mill.

So, reflecting that he had but sixteen irons in the fire at this time, he went to work without a moment's delay. The first thing he did was to send an order to Bristol, (for he never had any opinion of the mechanics at home,) for a complete set of mill machinery; and the second, to put up a house of pine weather-boards, for the mill. Contemporaneously with this last operation, he set about the dam; and, in the course of one summer, he had a huge breastwork of logs thrown across the path of the modest, diminutive Apple-pie, which would have terrified the stream even if it had been a giant.

As soon as this structure was completed, the water began to gather. My grand uncle came down every day to look at them, and as he saw them gradually encroaching upon the different little mounds of the swamp, it is said he smiled and remarked to his son Walter, whom he frequently took with him, "that it was strange to see what results were produced by human art." And it is also told of him, that he made his way, during the rising of the waters, to a tree in the bed of the dam, to notch with his penknife a point to which the flood would ultimately tend; that, while stooping to take a level with the breast of the dam, he lost his balance, and was upset into a pool, formed by the encroaching element; and that, when Walter expected to see him in a passion at this mishap, he rose laughing and observed, "that the bed of the dam was a damned bad bed; which is said to be the only pun that ever was made in the Hazard family, and therefore I have put it on record.

In a few days with the help of one or two rains, the dam was completely full; and to the infinite pleasure of my grand uncle, a thin thread of water streamed over one corner of the dam,—the most beautiful little cascade in the world; it looked like a glossy streamer of delicate white ribbon. My grand uncle was delighted. "There my boy," said he to Walter, "there is Tivoli for you! We shall have our mill a-going in a week."

Sure enough, that day week, off went the mill! All the corn on the farm was brought down to this place; and, for an hour or two that morning, the mill clattered away as if it had been filled with a thousand iron-shod devils, all dancing a Scotch reel. My grand uncle thumped his cane upon the floor with a look of triumph, whilst his eyes started from his head, (so as to produce a wonderful resemblance of his youthful picture,) as he frequently exclaimed to the people about him, "I told you so; this comes of energy and foresight; this shows the use of a man's faculties, my boy!"

It was about an hour and a half, or perhaps two hours,—as my authority affirms,—after the commencement of this racket and clatter in the mill, that my grand uncle, and all the others that were intent upon the operation, were a little surprised to discover that the millstone began to slacken in its speed; the boiling cloth was manifestly moving lazily, and the wheels were getting tired. Presently, a dismal screech was heard, that sounded like all the trumpets of Pandemonium blown at once: it was a prolonged, agonizing, diabolical note that went to the very soul.

In the name of all the imps of Tartarus and bad blood against friends of Arderon,—a famous interpolation of my grand uncle,—what is that?—Why, may the big Mahomet, (he spoke as rash as a heathen,) is the mill—is the mill—is the mill stopped? Why, I tell you, the gudgeon is new, and wants grease. He upon a court of inquiry was instituted; and, leading the van, followed by the whole troop, out went my grand uncle to look at the head gate. Well, not a thing was to be seen there but a large solitary bull-frog, squatted on his haunches at the bottom of the race, and looking up at his visitors with the most pitying and imploring countenance, as much as to say, "I assure you gentlemen, I am exceedingly astonished at this extraordinary convulsion, who is has left me, as you perceive, naked and dry."—Then the court proceeded upon the investigation towards the dam to discover what had caused it.

I can readily imagine how my grand uncle looked, when the scene here first presented itself to his view. It must have been just such a look as Sir Peter Teazle is made to put on, when the screen falls: a look of droll, waggish, solemn, silent wonder, which, for the time, leaves it a matter of perfect doubt whether it is to terminate in a laugh or a cry. In the first pause the beautiful ribbon cascade was clean gone. In the second, there were all the hassocks of the swamp, showing their small green heads above the surface of the water, which would hardly have covered one's shoe-top; and there were all the native shrubs of the marsh, bending forwards, in scattered groups, like a set of rose bushes that had been visited by a shower; dripping wet, and having their slender stalks tangled with weeds; and there was, towards the middle, a little line of rivlet meandering down to the edge of the dam, and then holding its unambitious course parallel with the breastwork, deploying to the left, where it entered the race, and tripping along gently, down to the very seat of the bull-frog. "Hosty, tosty," cried my grand uncle, after he had paused long enough to find speech, "here is some mistake in this matter!"

Now, it is a principle of physics, that an exhausted receiver is the worst thing in the world to make a draught upon. The mill-dam was like a bank that had paid out all its specie; and, consequently could not bear the run made upon it by the big wheel, which, in turn, having lost its credit, stopped payment with that bad news yell that rought such a shock upon the nerves of my grand uncle.

In vain did the old gentleman ransack the stores of his philosophy, to come at this principle. He studied the case for half an hour, examined the dam in every part, and was exceedingly puzzled.—"Those rascals of muskrats have been at work," said he. So, the examination was conducted to this point: but not a hole could be found. "The soil is a porous, open, filtrating kind of soil," said the old gentleman.

"It seems to me, master," said an arch looking negro, who was gaping over the head-gate upon the mud-lark waste, "that the mill's run out of water."

"Who asked you for your opinion, you scoundrel?" said my grand uncle in a great hurry,—for he was now beginning to feel,—"get out of my sight, and hold your tongue!"

"The fellow is right," said the miller, "we have worked out the water, that's clear!"

"It's a true bull," added the negro, in a voice scarcely audible, taking the risk of my grand uncle's displeasure, and grinning saucily but goodhumour ally, as he spoke.

It is said that my grand uncle looked up at the black with the most awful face he ever put on in his life. It was blood red with anger. But, betinking himself for a moment, he remained silent, as if to subdue his temper.

There was something, however, in the simple observation of the negro, that responded exactly to my grand uncle's secret thoughts; and some such conviction rosing upon his mind, gradually lent to and to smother his wrath. How could he beat the poor fellow for speaking the truth? It was,—and he now saw it was written in characters that could not be mistaken,—it was, after all his trouble, and expense, and fond anticipations, "a two-hour mill."

"Stop the mill," said my grand uncle, turning round, and speaking in the mildest voice to the miller, "stop the mill; we shall discontinue our work for to-day."

"Squire," replied the miller, "the mill has been as silent as a church for the last hour."

"True," said my grand uncle, recollecting himself; "come Walter, we will mount our horses and think over this matter when we get home. It is very extraordinary! Why did not I foresee this? Never mind, we will have water enough there to-morrow, my boy."

He slowly went to the fence corner, and untied his horse, and got upon his saddle as leisurely as if he had been at a funeral. Walter mounted his, and then both rode homeward at a walk; my grand uncle whistling Malbrook all the way in an undertone, and swinging his cane round and round by the tassel.

It fortunately happened that a tolerably wet season followed this first experiment of the mill. But with all the advantages of frequent rains, the morale flying truth became every day more apparent, that my grand uncle's schemes of accommodating the neighbourhood with a convenient mill for grinding their corn, were destined to be baulked, in the larger share of its usefulness, by that physical phenomenon which was disclosed to him on the first day of his operations; to wit, that his capacious reservoir was emptied of a much more rapid rate than it was filled. It was like a prodigate spendthrift, whose prodigality exceeded the income. The consequence was that the mill was obliged to submit to the destiny of working from one to two hours in the morning, and then to stop for the rest of the day, except in the very wet weather of the spring, (and this there was no great supply of corn,) in order by the most careful husbandry, to wring from the reluctant little water course a sufficient fund for the next day's employment.

This was a serious loss to the country around; for my grand uncle had talked so much about his projects, and extolled his beneficiation so largely, that the people had laid out their accounts to take all their grist to his mill. They came there, all through the summer, in crowds; and nothing was more common than to see a dozen ruminative old horses, with as many little horse-legged negroes astride upon them, with the large canvass mill-bags spread out for saddles, all collected of a morning round the mill door, each waiting for his turn to get his sack filled. Sometimes these monkeys were fast asleep for hours on their steeds; and sometimes they made great confusion about the premises with their wild shouts, and screams, and rough and tumble fights in which they were often engaged. But it invariably fell out that at least half were disappointed in their errands, and were obliged to attend the next day. In the day spoils the mill stopped altogether. These things gave great dissatisfaction to the neighbourhood, and many good customers abandoned the establishment. I am told, that the old gentleman was singularly unfortunate in his choice of a miller. He had a great gaunt of a fellow on that station, who was remarkable for a hard heart, hasty temper, red head, and a perpetual quarrel some temper. So fitful and so frequent were the neighbors expostulated in miller boy service to guard against the difficulty of getting their corn ground, this functionary, who was a little of the mental size and temper of a grizzly bear when roused, made his appearance for the second time, with his face swollen out, and gave the remonstrance a somewhat rough reception, by way of bringing them to reason.—Then again, he claimed a large pecuniary damage, and by its frequent exposure of the bottom to the sun, engendered foul vapours that made the country, in the autumn, very unhealthy.

These circumstances, in process of time, worked sadly to the disparagement of my grand uncle's profits, and set the people to talking in hush tones against his whole undertaking. They said the worst thing they could of it. "The dam was a bitch of a thing, they said, and not worth a mouse's whelp to boot; and about it with no cure, as long as he could get it ground any where else, if it was ten miles off."

In process of time, the miller was turned away; and then the machinery got out of order, and my grand uncle would not repair, and so the mill ceased to grind half. Following the course of nature, too, the dam began to manifest symptoms of premature old age. First, the upper beams decayed from the action of the sun upon them; after these, the lower parts of the structure broke loose. But what with dry rot and worm eaten boards and shingles, the mass which constituted the breastwork, was scarcely fit for to support the pond for some years.—It was a famous place for black snakes and sun fish, in the summer, and wild ducks in winter. All this time the stream found a vent through an opening that had been worn in the breastwork; and, consequently, the race had become entirely dry, and grown over with grass.

Year after year, the surface of the pond grew gradually less. It retreated slowly from its former edge, and became narrower. At length, at the breaking up of one unusually boisterous, wet and surly winter, there came on, in the month of March, a week of heavy and incessant rain. This celebrated week closed with one of the most furious tempests ever remembered in that part of the country. The heavens poured down near a month upon the monument mill-dam; the winds rushed, with a confounding energy, over this desolate tract, sieving the waters before them in torrents, and away went the rickety old breastwork, with all the impounded pool behind it.

The next morning the tempest subsided. The sun smiled again over the chaly scene; and there was fine dinning and slaughter of little Apple-pie, in all its former magnificence. Not a trace of the breastwork was left; and there was to be seen the foul and slimy bed of the mill pond, exposed in shocking nakedness to the eye. Long green tresses of weed, covered with the velvet of many years accumulation beneath the surface of the water, lay strewed about, wherever any stubborn shrub occurred to arrest their passage; huge trunks of trees, moss-grown and rotten, were imbedded upon the muddy surface; leaves, leaves and other vegetable wrecks were clinked up on each other in various forms, mingled here and there, with the battered and shapeless carcasses of the smaller vermin that frequented the pond. The wind swept with a brisk and whistling speed over the damp bottom, and visited, with a wintry rigour, the shivering spectators whom curiosity had attracted to witness the ravages of the night; but, in the midst of all, the feeble and narrow Apple-pie slunk hastily along, with a turbid stream, pursuing his course through, under, and around the collected impediments in his path, as near as possible in the very same channel which, ten or fifteen years before, he had been wont to inhabit; as if unconscious that the disturbance in the face of nature could be attributed, in the slightest degree, to such an insignificant and trifling imp as himself; by no means an unimpressive type of the confusion and riot which the most confident and paltry passions may produce in the moral world, when suffered to gather up and gangrene in the system.

New-York
TRAVELLER, TIMES & JOURNAL.

"Laugh at the toots, or pranks, that never fail,
Or sigh with pity at some mournful tale
Or peaceable hospitable stranger to his food—
And learn the luxury of doing good."

SATURDAY EVENING, August 31, 1833.

FALL RACES.

Since our notice of the Fall Races which appears on our first page, was put in type, we have seen a letter from Col. Johnson confirming what we there state, that Shark and Jessup will meet in the sweepstakes of $500 entrance—two mile heats. The gallant Colonel also enters the fine colt,—full brother to Here Claw." This stake is thus certain of becoming a very splendid affair, and must afford great sport to the lovers of a good race.

The entry so far known, stands thus:—Shark—the victor of Mahrs:—Mammoth—who beat Charles Kemble in a match this spring:—the full brother to Here Claw,—Henry Clause was sold for $3000;—Major Jones's colt—whose sire the great Pony Express stakes this spring:—and Col. Johnson's Match colt Jessup—by Medley, out of Betsy Robinson.

THE PLAYERS AND THE POSTMASTER.

We are happy to find by the annexed extract from the Transcript that Capt. Barrett and his independent Company, have gotten themselves clear of the snarl which threatened to pinch them some, what uncomfortably. Post Master Cass seems a second Caliger in this prosecution of the stage, which has set all Lowell in an uproar, but if the worthy Post Master, like those who shout for "silence" in a crowd in some overtrouble the very disorder he complains of"—for we learn that during the whole time of this dispute, Industry held her hand. The very water courses were still as standing Pools, and the Jennies became like lilies of the valley "who toil not, neither do they spin."

But happily for the preservation of Lowell, and the salvation of the Cotton Trade, the war is now over, the Belligerents are at peace, according to the treaty mentioned in the following Bulletin.

We learn from Lowell that the examination of Andrews was concluded on Thursday, and that he was bound over in the penal sum of $500, with one security, for the same amount, "to appear" at Concord on the second Monday in September next.—In the case of Barrett Williamson, and Smith, we have not learnt the decision of the Court, but presume they are in for it.

The manager has determined to close the theatre after Monday night next, when Master Burke will give a Grand Concert, being his first (and last?) appearance in the town of Lowell."

In accommodating Parson.—The first Sunday after the "three days" at Paris, a Curate performing service at a church in the environs of that city, began, as usual, to chant the prayer for the king—"Domine, salvum fac regem: but, as soon as he arrived at fac, he stopped short. After a pause he began again, in a loud voice, and pronounced, "Domine, salvum fac le Gouvernement Provisoire, to the great amusement of the congregation.

The Red House.—Mr. James Davis, as worthy a host as ever drew a cork or welcomed a guest,—has opened this neat and comfortable establishment near Niblo's Garden. To any one wishing to pass an idle hour agreeably, this house offers many inducements:—the means of amusement are there in abundance, either in a quiet game of billiards, or in social converse. Choice spirits assemble in front of the bar as well as behind it,—men of wit and information abounding with sportive jokes and sporting tales,—and a host whose intelligence as a man, is only equalled by his courtesy as a landlord.

VAUXHALL GARDEN.

Among the many resorts of pleasure which at present divide the attention of our citizens, the flowers, and bowers, of Vauxhall should not be forgotten. To the real worm treader, who has been the live long week, up to his eyes in bales, boxes, and invoices, a visit to the Lilac blossoming in a "soldier posy," as Byron calls a popular ditty, must be peculiarly delightful; for in its fragrant shades he may realize every thing that has brighten'd into verdure of Arcadian bowers, and as he contrasts them with the long list of his own busy warehouses, they will seem to argue he even a double bliss. The proprietor spares neither labor, or expense, to render his retreat worthy the generous patronage of citizens, which may be attracted to Dale and his flowers, and to hear the pleasure of attending his Concert on next Sunday Evening.

The Hall of Industry is now open at the Marble Buildings, Broadway, and affords a very delightful treat to all ages and sexes. The beauty and excellence of the Machinery—together with the practicality of seeing the labor of Dogs applied in such an ordinary of purposes, are a regular specimens of the great ingenuity which Morgan has displayed in mechanics. We strongly recommend every one to witness this singularly beautiful exhibition.

The Concert at Niblo's on Thursday evening was very brilliant affair;—Madle Feron was uncommon voice, and Mrs. Austin exhibited her natural wood notes wild in Arne's song of the Temple very delightfully. Mr Keene was warmly received on his second appearance since his return to this Country, and says his long sea-voyage has wrought in the same, the wild ducks in winter. All this time the stream found a vent through an opening that had been worn in the breastwork; and, consequently, the race had become entirely dry, and grown over with grass.

Year after year, the surface of the pond grew gradually less. It retreated slowly from its former edge, and became narrower. At length, at the breaking up of one unusually boisterous, wet and surly winter, there came on, in the month of March,

THREE DAYS BIOGRAPHY OF A BLACK AND WHITE STRAW HAT.

Sirs,—Secrecy is the land of confidence, and therefore, I invariably tell my distresses to an Editor. Now, Gentlemen, I am at present in delay and grief, and the cause of all my unendurable misery is a pen-knife hat. Yes indeed! a pen-knife! It is not like Joseph's coat "of many colors," but simply a black and white, alternating the two with mathematical precision like a chess board,—like a magpie,—like day and night,—or thunder and lightning,—or like any other "most unsavory simile." It was first in Boston, and brought up—by the Benjamin Franklin! Thus tranquilly passed the two first days of its existence,—but observe the third! there, we always an ominous number. This was the first straw hat that I had ever worn, so I took it into Broadway to treat it with a peep at our Belles, and then with a sight of its how. I met a fair friend who smiled approvingly on me and my hat. I rose at least two inches in my own estimation, and my hat full three cents in value, for I no longer conceived it dear at twelve shillings and four pence halfpenny—Eastern Currency. Are you smiling at my newly imported hat? I dare say it makes a great difference in my appearance." "Why, certainly I never saw you look so light hearted before!" "Oh! you Ladies have such an agreeable way of saying a civil thing!" I felt pretty sure my hat had made an impression already,—and so it proved,—for it was scarcely replaced on my head, after a most grateful and graceful bow to my fair complimenter, when a stranger, dressed at all points, but wanting the new chapeau hat to complete his costume, cast a lounging lazy glance at mine. At length he came up, and without a syllable of preface, (you know a perfect gentleman uses no superfluous words) he very coolly said, "that's a very nice hat!" "You make me proud, sir!" "I should like such a one myself! Where made it? What did you give for it? Where did you get it? and can you get one for me?" I thought these questions somewhat abrupt, but the compliment to the hat did away with all unpleasantry, and making him a low bow, I ingeniously contrived thereby to shew the Maker's name inside, and the price marked with a trade-mark-like hand in the corner. This little piece of ceremony took place near a scaffolding on the west side of Broadway while an Irish Hodman was ascending with his supply of mortar, but being mischievously tickled with my hat, he neglected his own hod, when down came half its contents on the top of my head, as he's about to take a cast of my personal form for the edification of phrenologists. Sir, I never was served so unhandsomely but once before, on my life, and that was on witnessing the exhibition of a predecessor of Sailor the present King of the Conjurers, when the professor of legerdemain broke divers eggs into his hat, and after heating them up into an omelet, at least to all appearance he did so, he presented his chapeau as free from culinary soil as my new hat of Hack and where before it had been pounded in the mortar. Doubting the possibility of this, I proffered my own hat for the experiment; it proceeded as before only with more reality, and when complete, he turned it on my head,—when—Oh! la, you never saw such an egregious mess in your lives. My behoved hat was now becoming somewhat too remarkable! I heard a person walking by my side, telling the anecdote that Brummell refused an introduction to a certain Earl because he wore a straw hat, alledging that none but fools and clowns thought it necessary to thatch their brains. This he no doubt thought an excellent joke,—but I thought over the lawyer's sentiment—"may the difference of opinion never alter!" I began to get a little out of conceit with my new roof, for the hot sun during full upon the top of the porous straw made my head ache as though it had stood a hour in the pillory. A shower of rain refreshed me for a few moments, but in a few more my fashionable straw was soaked through and through, and limber as a wet rag. All this I thought might have been avoided had I worn my customary Beaver,—but then it was so pleasant to set a new fashion! Driven by stress of weather into a neighboring hotel, my pet was dried and furbished up, while I solaced myself with my steak and port, and thus regained some of my usual placidity. Now be it known unto you Gentlemen Editors, that opposite my apartment to the outer door there stands or stood a stall full of divers peaches and sundry apples for the exercise and amusement of the "exhibition of larger growth" who burnishe with segars and slip slop on the stoops of all our hotels. An intimate friend of mine, struck with the novelty of my hat, begged it to sport awhile at the door, while I took, like Falstaff, "mine ease in mine inn." In a few minutes I heard the "darndest rocket" outside, and fearing for the safety of my favorite hat rushed forth—met my friend as rapidly coming in, and to my momentary joy received my treasure. But oh! sad fate! on going to the door to see what was the matter, the harridan of the fruit stall seized me by the collar, charged me with kicking over all her goods and chattels, and demanded five dollars for damage done. In vain I vowed and protested my innocence—nothing short of the money would satisfy her or the policeman, because, forsooth she would swear to me on her bible oath, as she knew me by my black and white flower pot hat!

Paying two dollars for my straw, and five for the damage, made my pet hat doubly dear to me,—and so to avoid the quizzing of my friends in doors, I sulked out. But Fate had marked this a black Monday; for while I was gallanting a party of ladies along, the wind blew off my little hat. Away it went, and I after it, for it was too light to stop while there was a breath of air so strong as a sigh. But this was not all. The ladies too had a pet, a little dog—lap dog, who confounded me—mistook my hat upon its mouth, and bounded along Broadway with it to the infinite amusement of the bystanders—and myself, of course. I quickened my pace, and he, too—evidently delighted at seeing me earnestling after him,—but finding I gained on him he ran off the pavement, dropped it in the middle of the road, where the four horses and four wheels of the "Red Rover" Omnibus trampled it into something a little worse than a dishclout—while I stood forlornly in the middle of Broadway, the laugh of my friends and the loser of my hat, and with no alternative but to leave Lotte in the Omnibus which had done me the grievous harm. I called on my friend and Hatter Charley St. John, to supply my loss, told him my tale of woes, as I now tell you, in hopes he would take a dollar or two from his prices—but alas! he was obdurate! he couldn't see what claim my misfortunes gave me on him—such is the hardness of Yankee souls—and though I acknowledge him the best of hat makers, he made me plank down my two dollars and a half more. So that my "once days of Straw Hat have cost me nine dollars, fifty-six and a quarter cents, besides a world of laughter and an eternity of quizzing. Young Men! Beware of a black and white Straw Hat.

Commercial Enterprise.—During the domination of Buonaparte, sugar, coffee, tobacco, cotton stuff, &c. were sent by sea from London to Salonica (in European Turkey,) whence those goods were carried on horses and mules across Servia and Hungary, into the whole of Germany, and even into France; so that the goods were consumed at Cassis, coming from England, only seven leagues distant, which goods had made a circuit equivalent, as far as expense went, to a voyage twice round the world!

FORBING A BEGGAR

To us the very improper caption of an article in the Bulwarkers Vester, touching the which we have a few words to bestow upon that refractory paper. We say improper; and for two reasons; firstly, it is very far from genteel; promptness to the exercise of mind unsavory notions of crime, pillaring, perseculiles, &c. with the concomitant images of trials, lawyers, dungeons, treadmills, and penitentiaries also of rogues, shop-lifters and vagabonds of sundry descriptions; all which is unpleasant in the extreme both to the moral and physical sense of propriety. Secondly it imports, as the gentlemen of the bar say, not absolute vanity, but an absolute lack of the same. The Vester has indeed committed a larceny of our possessions, and so far there is truth in the term "Robbing"; but we cannot with justice be called a Beggar, inasmuch as the chattels thereof we were despoiled was our own, lawfully ordered into possession, and not bestowed upon us in charity by any person or persons, known or unknown. Wherefore we say that the Vester has descended plump into a mistake, much to our detriment and its own loss of character.

Having thus disposed of the head, we come now to the body: and here we find matter for just reproof in the very first line. It is a sin against all the canons of editorial decitude, this naming of names between gentlemen of the quill and the scissors. We are not Foster, or Smith, or Tompkins, or Tomlinson; we are the New York Traveller, and it is indecorous in the extreme, to call us in question by any other appellative. We mention this fact thus explicitly for the enlightenment of the Vester, trusting that henceforth we shall find in its columns no cause for solemn rebuke on the like score. But again: the Vester says that our charge against him was scaly; we have an idea and no more, touching the signification of this word; it is a slang term for something or other, and no matter what: but slang is excessively ungentecl, and should never appear in any respectable journal.—Wherefore, sin Vester, let us intreat you to sully your columns no more with such equivocal, and ungentlemanlike epithets. Leave them to —— and ——, and to the political squibbers. Good society brands them at once with its deepest cut stamp of disapprobation. And now Vester, we have expended our charge of reproof, and are ready to enter upon the discussion of your defence.—We will take up your arguments, inconsequent as they are, seriatim. Your first position is clearly untenable; you copied the article from another paper, not credited. Why did'nt you credit that paper then? In that case the sin would lie at his door and not yours; as it is, you have convicted yourself of the larceny, with this only difference that you thought you were robbing from somebody and it turns out that you were in fact robbing from some other body; to wit, us. Secondly, you propound a grave query slily throwing a shade of impeachment over the joke market of Gotham; insinuating that it is flat and dull, since editors quarrel about a bad pun—Why Vester, what the plague could they quarrel about, with more wisdom? We tell you that pun are the spice of this world; not the salt merely, but the pepper, and the mustard, and the cayenne, and the soy, and the mushroom catsup, (not Ketchup, vister: that's not the right way to spell it;) of life. If we ever quarrelled at all, it would be for a conundrum, or as you call it, a pun; but we never do quarrel; it's ungenteel, and very exciting; puts a man in a heat, and hurts his digestion; makes him red in the face, and plays the deuce with his appetite: therefore we never quarrel. We never dreamed of quarrelling with you, man; we are always in a good humor; see how cool and pleasant we are at this moment! There's a blue bottle fly has been buzzing about our nose for the last three minutes and three quarters, and we have not even thought of sending him down with a French oath—which is nothing you know—swearing do'nt count unless it is done in plain English.

Lastly, Vester; you say that conundrums are dog-cheap in your city (likely enough;) and so are black berries here; but what are they good for? Let's look at your sample: if they are good for a laugh, we stand ready to trade; but don't think to come over us with your horn gun flints—

Come man, unbutton your jacket, and give us a peep at your wares.

Why is a mouse like a haystack?—Because the cat'll eat it.

Old as the hills; Keeley committed that, the third time he played Billy Black, about six years ago, more or less.

Why is the vane of St. Paul's Church like the Catskill House?—Because it's a top of a steeple (steep hill.)

New, for any thing we know; but not laughable, and therefore—we'll none of it. Could any man in his senses think for a moment of giggling at such a dull nonsense that?

When is the fifteenth letter in the alphabet most like Dr. Scudder's harpoon?—When it's sluggish, for then it's a turpel or (turpedo.)

Better, but not much. We can't deal with you if you've nothing more racy than this.

When is music most warlike?—When it's the "music of the spears."

Why is a celebrated Italian composer like a fiddle-bow?—Because he's Rossini (Rosin.)

Both old, and both bad.

Who is Louis Philippe of France like a diseased tooth?—Because he's aching (aching.)

Good, but none of your perpetrating; we've heard it some thousands of times, and with all sorts of king's names; there's nothing new about it except the Louis Philippe, and that won't pass muster.

Why does a mad man never want for company?—Because he's always beside himself.

Joe Miller forever. Look at page 207 of the 19th edition.

Why is a crossed-eyed man not entitled to a vote?—Because he is not natural-sighted.

Why is Black Hawk like a miller's bag?—Because he's a Sac.

Pretty for these; that is for you, but they won't do for us. We can't trade if you've nothing better to offer.

The late Fuel of Bridgewater.—A Paris paper, the Journal des Voyageurs, states that his eccentric nobleman, had at the time of his death, his house nearly filled with dogs and cats, which he had picked up at different places. Of the fifteen dogs which he kept, two were admitted to the honours of his table, and the whole of them were frequently dressed up in clothes like human beings. In his last days, when so debilitated as to be unable to leave his own grounds, he is said to have adopted a strange substitute for the sports of the field, to which he had been addicted. In the garden at the back of the house there were placed about 300 mints, and as many pigeons and partridges, whose wings had been cut. Provided with a gun, and supported by servants, the infirm old man would enter the garden and shoot two or three head of game, to be afterwards put upon the table as his sporting trophies!

Honesty in Switzerland.—It is customary in the canton Waldo, for those who have found any thing lost, even money, to affix it to a large crucifix in the churchyard: and there is not an example on record, of any object being taken away except by the rightful owner.

ANIMAL BIOGRAPHY

The Cock-chafer.—In the year 1—, the Cock' chafers appeared on the hedges and trees of the south west coast of the country of Galway, in infinites of thousands, clinging to each other's clothes, in the manner of bees when they swarm. During the day they continued quiet, but towards sunset the whole were in motion, and the humming noise of their wings sounded like distant drums. These numbers were so great, that for the space of twenty three square miles, they entirely darkened the air. Persons travelling on the roads, or who were abroad in the fields, found it difficult to make their way home, as the insects were continually beating against their faces, and occasion great pain. In a very short time, the leaves of all the trees, for several miles round, were destroyed, leaving the whole country, though it was near mid-summer, naked and desolate as it would have been in the middle of winter. The moss which these enormous swarms made in singing and devouring the leaves, was so loud as to have been compared to the distant sawing of timber. Swine and poultry destroyed them in vast numbers. These waited under the trees for chafers dropping, and devoured such swarms as to become fat on them alone. Even the native Irish, from the insects having eaten up the whole produce of the ground, adopted a mode of cooking them, and used them as food. Towards the end of summer they disappeared as suddenly, that, in a few days, not one was to be seen. The left.

The Death-Watch.—Notwithstanding its smallness, this creature is often the cause of serious alarm among the superstitious, from the noise which it makes at a certain season of the year, resembling the ticking of a watch. From this it has its name; for, whenever the Lenity is exerted, it is considered portentous of death to some one of the family in the house where it is heard. The philosopher and the naturalist may smile at a notion thus absurd; yet Sir Thomas Brown has remarked, with great earnestness, that the man, "who could eradicate this error from the minds of the people, would save from many a cold sweat the melancholy heads of nurses and grandmothers."

The weeper's bell
Before the dropping dew is told forth her knell.
The solemn Death-watch clock'd the hour she died.

It is generally in the advanced state of spring, that these insects commence their noise. This is nothing more than a call or signal, by which they are mutually attracted to each other; and it may be considered as analogous to the call of birds. It is not unfashionable, by the insect's beating on any hard substance with the shield or forepart of its head. The general number of successive distinct strokes, is from seven to nine or eleven. These are given in tolerably quick succession, and are repeated at uncertain intervals; and in old houses, where the insects are numerous, they may be heard during warm weather almost every hour in the day. The noise exactly resembles that made by beating with a nail upon the table.

The idea of taming this little animal may appear absurd: it has, however, been so much familiarized, as to be made to beat occasionally. On taking it out of its confinement, and beating with the nail or the point of a pen on a table or board, it will answer the beats very readily, and will even continue to repeat its efforts as long as it is required.

Dr. Derham kept a male and female together in a box for about three weeks: and, by imitating their noise, he made them beat whenever he pleased. At the end of this time one of them died; and soon afterwards the other gnawed its way out and escaped.

The Bombardier.—This insect conceals itself among stones, and seems to make but little use of its wings. When it moves it is by a sort of jump; and, when it is touched, we are surprised with a noise resembling the discharge of a musket in miniature, during which a blue smoke may be seen to proceed from its extremity. The insect may at any time be made to play off its artillery, by scratching its back with a needle. If we may believe Roulander, who first made these observations, it can give twenty discharges successively. A bladder, placed near its posterior extremity, is the ground that contains its store. This is its chief defence against its enemies; and the vapor or liquid that proceeds from it is so pungent a nature, that, if it happens to be discharged into the eyes, it makes them smart as though brandy had been thrown into them. The principal enemy of the Bombardier is another insect of the same tribe, but three or four times its size. When pursued and fatigued, the Bombardier has recourse to this stratagem; he lies down in the path of his enemy, who advances with open mouth to seize him; but, on the discharge of the artillery, the enemy suddenly draws back, and remains for a while confused, during which the Bombardier conceals himself in some neighboring crevice; but, if not lucky enough to find one, the older returns to the attack, takes the insect by the head, and tears it off.

The Tortoise Shell Butterfly.—These insects, soon after their emergence from the chrysalid state, discharge a few drops of reddish fluid, which, in places where they have been in great numbers, have had the appearance of a shower of blood, and have recorded by writers as the forerunner of some extraordinary event. The first discovery of this circumstance, that has been recorded, is related by M. de Reaumur. He says, that in the beginning of July, 1608, the people of the town of Aix were in the utmost alarm, from what they thought a shower of blood, that had just fallen in the suburbs, and for some miles round the place. M. de Peiresc, a philosopher, who, among other kinds of knowledge, had not neglected that of the operation and economy of insects, was consulted on the subject. He found the walls of a church yard near the place, and the walls of several small villages on the neighborhood, to be spotted with large drops of a blood-coloured liquid. A little time before this, he had happened to pick up a large and beautiful caterpillar, which he had carefully laid in a box. Immediately after its transformation into the butterfly state, he recorded that it had left a large drop of blood-coloured liquor on the bottom of the box. The red stains on the walls, on crosses near the highways, and in the fields, were found to be perfectly similar to that left on the bottom of the box. M. de Peiresc now no longer hesitated to pronounce, that all those blood-coloured stains, wherever they appeared, proceeded from the same cause. The prodigious number of butterflies, which he, for the same time, saw flying in the air confirmed his original idea. He likewise observed that the drops of the miraculous rain were never found in the middle of the town; that they appeared only in places bordering upon the country; and that they never fell upon the tops of houses, or upon walls more elevated than the height to which butterflies generally rise. When M. de Peiresc himself saw, he showed to many persons of knowledge or of curiosity, and established, as an incontestable fact, that the pretended drops of blood were in reality but drops of a reddish liquor deposited there by butterflies. It is also

ANIMAL BIOGRAPHY.

The Cockchafers.—In the year 1805, the Cockchafers appeared on the hedges and trees of the southwest coast of the county of Galway, in clusters of thousands, clinging to each other's backs, in the manner of bees when they swarm. During the day they continued quiet, but towards sunset the whole were in motion, and the humming noise of their wings sounded like distant drums. Their numbers were so great, that, for the space of seven or three square miles, they entirely darkened the air. Persons travelling on the roads, or who were abroad in the fields, found it difficult to make their way home, as the insects were continually beating against their faces, and occasion great pain. In a very short time, the leaves of all the trees, for several miles round, were destroyed, leaving the whole country, though it was near midsummer, as naked and desolate as it would have been in the middle of winter. The noise which these enormous swarms made in seizing and devouring the leaves, was so loud as to have been compared to the distant sawing of timber. Swine and poultry destroyed them in vast numbers. These waited under the trees for clusters dropping, and devoured such swarms as to become fat on them alone. Even the native Irish, from the insects having eaten up the whole produce of the ground, adopted a mode of cooking them, and used them as food. Towards the end of summer they disappeared so suddenly, that, in a few days, there was not a single one left.

The Death-Watch.—Notwithstanding its sweetness, this creature is often the cause of serious alarm among the superstitious, from the noise which it makes at a certain season of the year, resembling the ticking of a watch. From this it has its name; for, whenever this family is exerted, it is esteemed portentive of death to some one of the family in the house where it is heard. The philosopher and the naturalist may smile at a notion thus absurd; yet Sir Thomas Brown has remarked, with great earnestness, that the man, "who could eradicate this error from the minds of the people, would save from many a cold sweat the nefarious heads of nurses and grandmothers."

The weather's bell
Before the drooping flock toll'd forth her knell.
The solemn Death-watch clock'd the hour she died.

It is generally in the advanced state of spring, that these insects commence their noise. This is nothing more than a call or signal, by which they are mutually attracted to each other; and it may be considered as analogous to the call of birds. It is not occasioned by the voice, but by the insect's beating on any hard substance with the shield or forehead of its head. The general number of successive distinct strokes is from seven to nine or eleven. These are given in tolerably quick succession, and are repeated at uncertain intervals; and in old houses, where the insects are numerous, they may be heard during warm weather almost every hour in the day. The noise exactly resembles that made by beating with a nail upon the table.

The idea of taming this little animal may appear absurd; it has, however, been so much familiarized, as to be made to beat occasionally. On taking it out of its confinement, and beating with the nail or the point of a pen on a table or board, it will answer the beats very readily, and will even continue to repeat its efforts as long as its is required.

Dr. Derham kept a male and female together in a box for about three weeks; and, by imitating their noise, he made them beat whenever he pleased. At the end of this time one of them died; and soon afterwards the other gnawed its way out and escaped.

The Bombardier.—This insect conceals itself among stones, and seems to make but little use of its wings. When it moves it is by a sort of jump; and, when it is touched, we are surprised with a noise resembling the discharge of a musket in miniature, during which a blue smoke may be seen to proceed from its extremity. The insect may at any time be made to play off its artillery, by scratching its back with a needle. If we may believe Roulander, who first made these observations, it can give twenty discharges successively. A bladder, placed near its posterior extremity, is the arsenal that contains its store. This is its chief defence against its enemies; and the vapor or liquid that it ejects from it is of so pungent a nature, that, if it happens to be discharged into the eyes, it makes them smart as though brandy had been thrown into them. The principal enemy of the Bombardier is another insect of the same tribe, but three or four times its size. When pursued and fatigued, the Bombardier has recourse to this stratagem: he lies down in the path of his enemy, who advances with open mouth to seize him; but, on the discharge of the artillery, the enemy suddenly draws back and remains for a while confused, during which the Bombardier conceals himself in some neighboring crevice; but, if not lucky enough to find one, the latter returns to the attack, takes his insect by the head, and tears it off.

The Tortoise Shell Butterfly.—These insects, soon after their enlargement from the chrysalid state, discharge a few drops of reddish fluid, which, in places where they have been in great numbers, have had the appearance of a shower of blood, and have recorded by writers as the forerunner of some extraordinary event. The first observer of this circumstance that has been recorded, mentioned by M. de Reaumur. He says, that on the beginning of July, 1696, the people of the town of Ax were in the utmost alarm, from what they thought a shower of blood, that had just fallen in the suburbs, and for some miles round the place. M. de Peyrere, who lived at Ax, among other kinds of knowledge, had not neglected that of the speculation of the times; and, on the spot, he ascertained, on the subject, that the fluid was contained in the bladders of the insects, which he found in the walls of a church, and near the place, and the walls of several small villages in the neighborhood, to be spotted with large drops, as if bloodstained liquid. A little time before, he had, himself, picked up a large and beautiful butterfly, which, he had carefully laid in a box. Immediately after the thunderstorm, into the house, he was surprised that it had lost a large drop, as if it had leaped upon it, on the bottom of the box. He then chanced to the window, and saw near the house, a spot in the fields, were found to be perfectly exact to that left on the bottom of the box. M. de Peyrere now no longer hesitated to pronounce, that all those blood-colored stains, which every day appeared process from the same cause. The prodigious number of butterflies, which he, at the same time, saw flying in the air, confirmed his original idea. He likewise showed, that the drops of the miraculous rain were never found in the middle of the town; that they appeared only in places lying upon the country, and that they never fell upon the roofs of houses, or upon walks more elevated than the ground to which butterflies generally rise. When M. de Peyrere himself saw, he showed to many persons of knowledge or of curiosity, and established, as an incontestable fact, that the pretended shower of blood were in reality but drops of a reddish liquid ejected from the butterflies. It is also worthy of remark, that all the showers of blood, that have been received to have happened, took place in the warm seasons of the year, when the butterflies are most numerous.

A Bachelor's Choice of Happiness.—It is better to walk than to run; it is better to stand than to walk; it is better to sit than to stand; it is better to lie down than to sit; it is better to sleep than to lie down; it is better to die than to sleep.

The Park Theatre opened for the season on Wednesday evening, and if there is any truth in the old saw "well begun is half done" it was the commencement of a most prosperous season. The opening of a theatrical Campaign always gives rise to thousand rumors, hopes and expectations, and this season has been most prolific in them, the far the most part they are so utterly absurd that even to name them would be giving them an importance their intrinsic worthlessness does not merit.

One of the Wise Men of Gotham gravely asks thro' a Morning Paper,—why does the Managers publish the name of their Stock Company?—we answer him, (as the worthy Editor he addresses is uncertain on the point) that it is not the practice of the Theatre to do so. He further asks "who are to support the Week?"—The same who support Mrs. Austin and Miss Hughes. And he then wonders-hands that Mr. Jones, and Mrs. Sharpe are going about starving!" We beg to inform him the lady played the night before his questions were published, and Mr. Jones is still engaged at this Theatre as heretofore.

The new Farce of the "Irish Ambassadors,"—"Teddy the Tiler," and Petticoat Government formed the bill for the opening night. The two first were for the purpose of introducing Mr. Power to the notice of our citizens, and we feel much pleasure in recording that the introduction met with a warm and hearty welcome. The House was crowded in every part and the enthusiastic plaudits that attended his entrance did not subside for many minutes. Indeed if a kind welcome was extended by the audience to all their old favorites, and sufficiently marked the estimation in which they held those whose lives are a continued series of endeavors to please. Mr. Power is the best representative of a certain line of Irish Character that has been on the stage for some years. His person is well formed and agreeable, and his voice (by-the-way, is mellow and sufficiently touched with the melody of the brogue. His deportment is gentlemanly in the extreme, and his manner easy varied, and pleasant,—for in the ambassadors he brought out in the Drawing Room on to the stage, and in the Tiler, the fashions of the roof were rendered agreeable even in the Drawing Room. The farce of the Irish Ambassador is a translation by Kenney from the French,—Diplomat,"—and Sir Patrick O'Plump, introduced by the author instead of the original French victim—has been worked up by the Actor into a most laughter provoking specimen of Irish blundering. His story is very brief,—according for illustrations of picturesque costume he stumbles into the midst of political intrigues in a German Court—is unceremoniously made the pivot on which the whole machinery turns,—every event good or ill seems to spring from his agency—and he is alternately spurned by the lower complimented by her sire,—abused by an unsuccessful diplomatist in good set terms, and alternately his his arms almost shaken off in congratulations from all parties for acts of his of which he remains in profound ignorance, even at the dropping of the curtain.

These various embarrassments were delineated by Mr. Power with a vast deal of neatness and woman,—and roars of laughter attended them from the beginning to the end of the Farce. Mr. Power has made a decided hit, and we anticipate much pleasure from his future performances.

On Thursday evening, the Irish Ambassador was repeated together with the Irish Tutor and the Chimney Piece,—the House was quite full, and all seemed delighted with the performances. In Doctor O'Toole, Mr. Power introduced the celebrated Irish song called the "Groves of Blarney,"—which tickled his auditors amazingly,—for he sang it with much taste and humour.

Coleman's Comedy of "John Bull," was presented last night,—but it was too late in concluding, for us to give any account of its performance.

On Monday, the 9th September, the charming Mrs. Wood will begin her enchantments in the magic opera of Cinderella. Those who have not heard her, love a treat in store, which their utmost anticipations cannot realize,—and those who have, know full well what they shall experience in the renewed enjoyment of that skill which has long been the admiration of the most accomplished Musical Societies in the Old World. The excellence of this lovely musician is as varied as it is unquestioned,—and the severest critic must fain to prove in which she most excels,—on the simple Ballad which touches the heart by its pathos and expression,—or in the brilliant bravura that challenges the nicest judgement by its skill and power.

Mr. Wood who is an exceedingly fine young man and possesses a voice of great sweetness, and considerable cultivation,—will appear as the Prince in the same opera, and the combined talents of the two will give to this favorite production a new, and re-invigorated life.

Mr. W. Taylor has resigned his post as leader of the Band from ill health,—and Mr. Pearson,—who has been for years the leader to the Orchestra in Dublin, is engaged to supply his place.

NATIONAL TASTES RESPECTING ANIMAL FOOD.

Everything that moves in earth, air, or sea, is devoured by man. In some valleys of the Alps the rearing of snails is carried on as a trade, and in the month of September, they are sent down to Dijonlie to Vienna and Hungary, where they are used as an article of luxurious food. In South America nothing is in the shape of life comes wrong to them—they eat serpents, lizards, and snakes and Humboldt has seen children drag enormous serpents out of their holes, and crunch them up. At Emerichi their delicate morceau is a roasted monkey. Puppies, on the Missouri and Mississippi are choice food. Horseflesh in Arabia; elephants' flesh in India; camels' flesh in Egypt. The Parishe of Hindostan contend for place in man with dogs, vultures, and kites. The Chinese devour rats, frogs, eels and serpents; bears, paddy, birds, and swallows, are dainty dishes. The inhabitants of Cochin China prefer rotten eggs to fresh. The Tonquinese and inhabitants of Mesopotamia prefer locusts to the finest fish. In Asia a good fat gull would be preferred to everything else; and in the West Indies a large caterpillar found on the palm is esteemed a luxury, while the whole nests of the Java swallows are so much dainty, the ingredients of the dish will cost 10l. 10 guineas of expectation on the Continent commence Terrapins the best, as the guest whether he prefers the end of the hedge or that of the rump. Gourmands in London are remarkably fond of spiders. Great Britain even transcends the continental epicures. The library of Scotland is potted meat, in the soup has not died in their grave and without is seldom relished till it highly, or, in honest language, till it is a mere putrefaction, disengaging in a short time one of the most sapid poisons the human is known. In numerous cases it is a mass of life and motion the offspring of putridity. Pigs are still which to death. Lobsters are boiled alive; and are eels are skinned, writhing in agony, lobsters are hunted to death, and white veal is the great luxury.

POSTAGE TO CANADA.

The Kingston (U. C.) Chronicle copies the Post office department notice requiring the postage on all papers to Canada and the provinces to be paid in advance at the office where mailed, or at the frontier, with the following observations. We should be glad to find the Chronicle right in its supposition, for the new arrangement puts us to charges, to the amount of some goodly number of dollars.—"We hope the New York papers will inform us what was that communicated to the United States Post Office the information that "the Postmasters in British North America have been instructed not to collect, nor to be accountable" to that office "for the postage on newspapers sent by mail from the United States into the British Provinces." Directly on reading the above Circular, we applied to the Postmaster of this town, to inquire the purport of it, when we were informed that no such instructions as those alluded to the circular had been received at the Kingston Post Office, nor was it believed that any had been given to any Post Office in the Canadas. The Postmaster General of the United States has therefore been very wrongly informed, perhaps by interested individuals.

A WORD OR TWO OF THE BIRTH AND MARRIAGE OF ONE BARNEY FAGAN.

It was midnight—the heavens thunder'd, and the rain fell,—my father was kicked out of bed by the ladies,—the midwife's lap-dog barked,—the clock struck, Mrs. Kinsplug sneezed, and I was popped into the world.

After such a multitude of mysteries about the birth, it is natural to suppose there was something very wonderful in the boy; and indeed, my first appearance in town put the river in this entirely for no sooner did Mrs. M. Snifter put her fingers into my mouth to feel in what condition my gums were to receive a coral, than she gave a shriek that might have softened the heart of a tax-gatherer at his third time of calling, and immediately bared her astonished digits to the company, each as bloody as the end of Macbeth's dagger.

"A miracle, a downright miracle!" shouted the midwife, when in the whol of her amazement, emptied a very sublime decoction, she had just prepared, into Mrs. O'Flanagan's lap; being the first time she ever was known to make that use of a brandy sling. Mrs. O'Flanagan screamed, and so did the midwife; but all the noise they could make, was of no service in doing away the fact, that my jaws were already equipped with a very respectable double row of tack teeth, and as has been seen already, a natural genius for using them to advantage.

"Illweeds thrive apace," says one of my nurse's gossips, aside, and winking to her neighbor.

"The devil a use he'll have of a nurse clive for a teething bone any way," whispers a other.

"Tis a born beauty he is "without a doubt, surpers a third, and the very image of his father, God bless him!" (by the way, my father was notoriously the ugliest man in three parishes.") In short every one had something or other to say on the subject, until at last, growing tired of their compliments, I fell into a sleep, which kept one busy enough dreaming about sugar plums and cock crow, and such was the evening and the morning of the first day."

If we pass over the rap I gave my little brother Tim on the head with the ladle, for calling me Bonnport, in reference to my mouthful of grinders, and a few other little etceteras in the same line, nothing of any importance occurred till the christening: an event that took place in the third day after my first salam. During the earlier part of the ceremony, I lay quiet as possible; entirely wrapt up in the beauty or my red shoes and white stockings, but no sooner did Father Kennedy begin to sprinkle my countenance, than I gave a kick and a roar, the like of which have not been heard in the chapel of Balina from that day to this. "Och its your ravirence that has drav the divil out of him intirely, with the bless water," says old Sheilah Delany, "for if I have any skill in the matther, and to be shure its myself that should, seeing I'm the seventh daughther of the seventh daughther, that screetch we heard was no screetch at all, but the evelons on his passage out, and at the pitch of his voice building a sweet bud buck to us all in broken Irish.

Of my earlier boyhood my memory is a mere blank, but there's not a letter effaced from it, tracing the time I was under the tuition of the parish school-master. The progress I made with him however was only so so, for which he was constantly excusing himself, "Barney you villain" he would often say to me, "no matter what road you choose to take in the world, there's little danger of your being fettered down by the prejudices of genius or education, in as much, as that numscull of yours is as hard, and as thick, as the pan cake." "But not so easily cracked, master dear" I would answer with a wink, "or sure them Iron Knuckles must have made a breach in it long since.

Attaventy my education being finished I began to think of setting up for myself in the world, and looking out for a wife; my pretensions were considerable, for besides a fair proportion of the family scenes nature had showered upon me every one of the family charms. There were my father's carrots locks, my uncle Ben's smile nose, brother Tim's bandy legs, and a host of other attractions, the least of which was enough to take the eye of the best enlisting that ever kicked in the ninka, not to mention those I inherited from myself, namely, the two rows of barks already put down, and a certain way of blarneying of my own, that might have wheedled the devil out of a title proctor, or any girl in the world, having Mary O'Brian of the sweet brown of Kellaloo, out of herself. However, while I was putting the cumbleshot on Mary, an maiden aunt of hers, hearing the same name, was throwing a sheep's eye at me and my twenty acres. I was which way I would in the morning going out, I was sure to find myself in the direction of Miss O'Brian's cottage before I came home, and likewise do so I might the devil a fifty yards I could ever find my self out of the neighborhood of her land of an aunt. At last I was obliged to put a mad in the business, so one night seeing Mary alone in the window enjoying the moonlight, I commenced operations.

"Who's that I see blinking over the hedge?" says Mary.

"Nobody at all my heart's elixer," says I, throwing the prettiest sprig of a boy, you ever clapped your two good looking eyes upon;" by this I was check by Jowl with her, and after receiving one of equals at ease in my right cheek that is, the point of a huge corncob pin, while attempting to snatch a bite thereof for my trouble. "Get out out of this you monster" say she. "Tis come in my angel you mean" says I, for a young lady always says no, when she means yes;" to be sure it is possible after about half an hour's kissing and cutting, during which I thought I had settled the business in so much as I had come twenty times on Jody's lips with the emphasis of a six pounder, and received a more than equal number of thumps on the head, and kicks in the ancles. I heard her fathers foot on the stairs and so to save him the trouble of kicking me out of the door I jumped out of the window, and soon found myself at home all hot dead from the effects of my first night's courtship.

Barney Fagan was a name sake and a cousin of mine, and according to the neighbors, a great deal a prettier boy than myself, though to be sure my mother would have got up any night in the week at twelve o'clock, to prove that the neighbors were all wrong. Of this Barney I had my own suspicions, for it was hinted about town that he and Mary O'Brian the younger, were pulling a strong gaffer under the rose. Twas about this I was dreaming the whole night, for in the next morning all my sorrow was put to its rest, by the receipt of a love letter, folded like a heart, and in the hand writing of the prettiest girl in the station. Day after day, and week after week followed,—at least so said the almanac, for the valed not appear by minutes in the life of the favored lover of Miss Mary O'Brian. Such kissing and courting, and tea parties, and presents of ribbons and breast knots, and pincushions, &c. &c. were never before known in the quiet town of Kellaloo. I had even another reason for rejoicing in my triumph, besides the anticipated possession of Mary, for I knew that my cousin was his lover heard in love with her, while in regard of some wicked insinuations he used to be throwing out touching my cracked nose and my bandy legs, I hated him as the devil hates an archbishop.

In short my happiness was all but complete, though, to be sure, by way of a damper, I now and then thought I observed a sneer lurking about Mary's lips, which seemed to say as much, as that she was wishing a lady safe to the devil. It also struck me, though while in company together he was lively in the habit of hanging his head, that I had more than once caught Barney the second, grinning mysteriously at me over his shoulder, but what surprised me more than all was, that for the last two months, I had seldom been annoyed by the apparition of our maiden aunt, Mary the elder.

"Mary Alana," says I to the niece one night," when are you going to put the strap into the buckle?"

"That's the very thing" says she, "that's running between me and my rest, for do you know my father is thinking of a match between me and old Grogan, the rich miller."

"O the cannibal!"

"Nothing less I assure you; so what ever we do, must be done quickly, and in the dark."

"This I promisely assented to." You have heard of course that your cousin Barney and my aunt, are to be married "under the rose" to morrow night?"

"No!"

"Indeed!—I thought he had entrusted you with the secret. Well, between you and me, they are, but mind it goes no farther, and so as the priest is already engaged, if you have no objection, we will kill two birds without stone."

Here she paused to blush and I was struck dumb with surprise.

"To prevent suspicion," she continued we will meet no more until we meet forever,—but dont for get to be in the priest's kitchen at seven o'clock. Adieu."

You may be sure the grass hadn't time to grow under Barney Fagan's feet, until he was at home and preparing for the bridal; but scarcely had I time to cut a caper or two at the glass, when somebody pushes opens the door and in walks the priest.

"Barney," says he, smiling, "your's a nice party boy, and a good christian, and a better warrant at paying the dues."

"What the devil can he be driving at" thinks I, for I knew all this to be a lie though it was the priest himself that told it. "Your Reverence," says I, "is very kind this morning."

"Whisht," says he, "and dont be after interrupting the Lord's annointed. Well as I was saying, isn't Tom O'Brian's daughter Mary, a darlint creature?"

"A perfect angel."

"Hout you wicked sinner, I did'nt say angel, but has'nt she a beautiful foot?"

"Like a fairy!"

"And a voice?"

"Like a nightingale."

"And an eye?"

"Like the sun."

"And lips?"

"Like honey."

"And would'nt she be worth an acre of any mans farm that ever lifted a reaping hook?"

"O yes your raverence one hundred thousand."

"Then take my word for it Barney Fagan, the devil an inch of Mary O'Brian's arm you'll ever nick under your oxter."

I started back and look'd, for all the world, as if I had seen a ghost.

"Sit down again Barney" says he southeringly, "and we'll see what's to be done—I have taken a fancy to that gray mare of yours—what would you be for askin to boot, between her and my little fodlered Moll."

"O Father O'Flinn, she's yours hand and heart—body and soul." Only tell me all my trouble, and if it suits your pleasure give a lame dog a lift over the stile."

"O fie, Barney axie, have done, you talk so—as if you thought I was putting in for a bribe. Do you know that Mary and your cousin Barney are to be married to-morrow night, at the same time that you are to be made bone of her bone, with auld Aunty Peppercastes?"

"The devil no—but oh murther in Irish—the dawn begins to break, and I see plainly that the schoolmaster was right when he said my head was as thick as an iron skillet."

"Whisht, and be silent. The kitchen is to be dark—the lubes to be yoked—the bridegrooms to be muffled up to the forehead for fear of surprise. Mary the elder is to wear Mary the younger's blue frock—who in her turn wears the others' white gown. The ceremony the favored lover, and by proper agreement gives my aunt on the sly, a nip on the right leg or—(purching my ear.) "All this while you are to be engaged with the old-fashioned Miss in her teens, who is to be mighty silent and shy, and retiring—then in steps I—seizes my hook, and soon turns the two couple into a single pair, and then of course you are all as happy as thieves at a fair."

"O Father O'Flinn—jewel and darling that you are, let go my arm till I faint."

"And hose Mary oh! Let Father O'Flinn alone for that. You—Barney my boy, that cousin of yours blows himself with his left hand, and does other things to boot, too bad for the lips of a holy man to no whom—and so if we could turn his tricks on himself, it would be nothing more or less than a deed of christian charity."

That's nothing but gospel truth your Reverence.

Well Barney you rogue, you know he's the divil himself for cocking the little finger, and so if you can manage by hook or by crook to earn him before the bridal, he may forget the signal, and then the day is yours again the field—and sure if all fails you can turn the back of your hand against auld vinegar cruet any way. And now axie good morning, and, when but its no matter—I was only going to tell you that I wouldn't mention a word at all at all, about our bargain—between Bother-ol Moll and the Grey Mare.

* * * * * * *

The room was so dark as curtained windows and a cloudy twilight, could make it—we were all still and silent—but the cousin who was still staggering under the effects of the potcheen, and who (all good angels be praised for it) forgot to give the signal appointed—not as I Mary carries the taken of a talant her till the very day.—"Are eyes all ready says Father O'Flinn"—we advanced—the ceremony was performed in whispers—it was concluded—as is a usual on such occasions we lifted the veils to kiss the brides—when Mary hook'd into my face—gave a shriek—and tumbled into my arms.

There is little to add—but that Barney the second never forgave me from that day to time—though I am still in all while his lady who did not cate a pin how the business turned out so as she got a husband—and that my own Mary the best of dad bargains and the Father O'Flinn rides a grey horse and is considered the best mounted curate, any where between Tillaloo and the city of Limerick.

THE NEW POLICEMAN.

John White he was the smartest man
Of all the New Police,
Though he had but a pound a week
To keep him and the peace.

Among his brother officers
You might have found some bigger;
But John White, No. 28,
Was well known by his figure.

The servant maids, as John went by,
Stole to their doors to talk,
And so would he long on the step
Though not allowed a walk.

Soon to a cook, one Susan Fry,
He spoke of faithful love,
And swore she was, though kitchen maid,
All other maids above.

The cook had vowed that none to her
Cool treatment should impute;
So, looking at his uniform,
She smiled upon his suit.

But soon, alas! she found him out.
And his bright prospects marred—
Though John, like all the New Police,
Was always on his guard.

One night she called to see Jane Sly,
The cook to Doctor Drake,
And there, with Jane and oyster sauce,
She found her love at steak!

John kept his eyes fixed on his plate,
Alarmed at Susan's sight
Who cried, "For shame!" and then declared
Next day her wrongs she'd write.

She sent this touching note to Jane:
"Ya'll never see me more;
For ya axe spilt a appy pear.
And cut me to the core."

And then she wrote to faithless John—
"Ya kno, sur, I'm pure betters:
Imbede the postman says I've mand
Sum progress in my letters.

"I oped for joy, John, wen I chose
My Lou from humble state—
For being cook, of course I knoo
Wot brooks attend the grate.

"But ya've deceived me, so farewell,
Ya false and crewel yuth:
I've found, though ya're one of the 'Farce,'
'Tis not the 'Force of Truth.'

"So I'm determined, O, John Wite,
To plunge into the river:
And scorn, as I axe lost my heart,
To be a for-lorn hiere"

To Water-loo Bridge straight she went,
Poor melancholy soul!
Where, as she was a belle of death,
She paid the usual toll.

Then turning pale at thoughts of White,
She sealed the bridge's shrink,
And, like a fearless kitten-maid,
Thus perished in a sink!

John's still alive; but grown so thin,
With constant woes and pains,
That literary servant maids
Now call him "Hake's Remains."

Literary Gazette.

JAM JEHAN NIMA.

This is, or rather is to be, the name of a new magazine, proposed to be published in London by John Howard Payne, Esq. It means "The Goblet where in you may behold the Universe," and is intended to give an idea of the nature and character of the work to which it belongs—or is to belong. The intention of Mr. Payne is to publish his journal weekly in London; and to enlist in its support, the united talent of England and the United States.—The prospectus is too long to be copied, but we will endeavor to extract from it in as few words as may be, the benefits to be derived by both countries, from the establishment of the Magazine.

And first to America: it is to provide a depository where original literary productions from the writers of England and America may appear side by side, and thus create a competition tending to most favorable influences upon American literature. It is to supply a vehicle in which the intellectual interests of America may be upheld. To furnish to Europe a catalogue raisonne of all original books issuing from the American press. To circulate the names and powers of numerous writers of first rate merit, whose reputation now is merely local. To communicate every discovery hit upon in science and the mechanical arts. To answer misrepresentations of this country before they have time to take root. To give opportunity for the asking and answering of questions on both sides of the Atlantic, on all subjects of moment. To supply Americans resident abroad with all the "authentic chit chat" of their home (a delectable phrase by the way). To convey from England intelligence fuller, and more to be relied on than is to be found elsewhere: and lastly to be an oracle to the ladies, touching the fashions, &c. &c.

To England it is to provide opinions upon productions and events unaffiancied by party or local politics. To afford the countries of Europe the readiest means of information upon some points to which they are now intently looking. To supply persons desirous of emigrating with more copious information upon topics most important to them than they can obtain from other sources; and to convey the unvarnished truth to artists and the lovers of the drama, concerning the value set on their country men who may become known to the people of the United States.

The work is to be printed on thirty-two large octavo pages in the best style London can accomplish. The price of subscription is to be ten dollars per annum, and the publication will be commenced as soon as a sufficient number of names have been given in to secure the expenses.

We have only room left to say that we heartily wish Mr. Payne success in his enterprise.

Subscriptions will be received by Bliss & Wadsworth, at No 205 Broadway.

Tit for Tat—The passengers on board an Aberdeen smack were most grievously annoyed by the nocturnal visitations of myriads of hungry bugs—These little blood suckers were so incessant in their attacks, that to close an eye was utterly out of the question; nay, so severely did some suffer, that in the morning, when all hands were mustered in the cabin, their physiognomies were to be recognised with considerable difficulty! One night their agonies became so intolerable, that they bellowed out "to the master of the vessel, "O, master! master! the re being us!" "Wha the deil's hailing ye?" cries the master. "O, sir! the d—l bugs." The response of the master, if not consolatory, was admirable logic: "Weel, care fall ye, canna ye bite them again?"

SKETCHES OF SOCIETY.

FREDERICK WILLIAM FIRST, OF PRUSSIA.

The memoirs of the Princess of Bareuth, the sister of Frederick II, have imitated us in the minutest secrets of that most whimsical monarch. Frederick William I, who indulgit nothing so satisfactory to the lord of a king, as the opportunities of the spirit of economy and austerity in his palace or in his extent, as to refuse pleasure, never on certain occasions, when more frequently reduced to very the condition of the meanest citizen. A anecdote has lately been published at Hamburgh, consisting of papers received from observers, found, it is said, in the collection of one of Frederick the Second's principesses, which perfectly accords with the Princesses Prussia's memoirs, and places the extraordinaries of the father of Frederick the Great in a still stronger light. The second of these papers is entitled "How we can Frederick, is to carry on his studies at Wusterhausen." It is an instruction written by the king. Among other things he says, "On Sundays let the princesses rise at half past eight o'clock; as soon as he has put on his shoes, he will hand to the side of the bed, and daughter a short prayer to God but in a tone of voice loud enough to be heard by those who are in the room; as soon as that is done, he will dress himself quickly, wash himself well, use his hair, and powder it. Dressing and praying will not occupy more than a quarter of an hour. It will then be a quarter after seven. He will breakfast in seven minutes. After that, his servants and Dubuc (the governor) will enter to say prayers on their knees &c. With respect to education, the kings wishes are that it shall be the plan of studies which he proposes.—The history of Greece and Rome is to be omitted; it is good for nothing." The principesses royal found much difficulty in complying with the demands of his august Father. In 1725 he addressed a number letter to him, to ascertain why he succeeded so ill in satisfying the king. The answer to the letter is—"Because you are obstinate, because you do not love your father; in the second place, you will know that I do not like an effeminate fellow, who has no manly in his character, who is fond of a fine dress, who does not distinguish himself either in riding, or in shooting, who is dirty, who frizzes his hair like a fool, and who, a thousand times repriminded, never corrects himself; who, moreover, has a ridiculous pride, never speaks to any body, is neither popular nor affable, makes faces, and never obeys my wishes except when he is compelled to do so. There is my answer. (Signed) Frederick William. The same monarch saw in his instructions to his son's governors:—"The principal aim of the tutors must be to inspire in my son the love of a military life, and to make him sensible that as nothing in the world can confer on a prince so much honour as the sword, he will be despised if he does not love it above every thing and seek in it his glory." Frederick William II, in his instructions were fulfilled to the letter, and that the tutors succeeded pretty well in inspiring Frederick II. with "the love of the sword." Another paper in this collection exhibits the despotism of Frederick William I, in religious matters. Full of Lutheran zeal, the king had much at heart to banish from the cruzze every thing that could recall the rites of the Catholic church. In consequence, he prescribed, with a rigour almost fanatical, or rather with his usual military despotism, surplices, tapers, Latin prayers, &c. to the great dismay of the pastors and the parishioners, habituated from their infancy to these ceremonies. Happily, his son afterwards restored liberty in that respect, without, however, entirely abolishing the arbitrary orders of his father. The curious paper of the collection, seems to is, how ever, to be the ordinance by which Frederick William summoned the Count de Stion to the vice-presidency of the Academy of Sciences. The following are the contents of this document, written in the style of which is singularly abrupt:—"The king enjoins the new vice-president to observe closely the conjunctions of the stars, and to see if there is not in the firmament a meeting of comets which may endange the earth. In such a case, the vice-president must confer with his colleagues, in order to devise the means of remedying the disorders which may ensue. The vice-president is enjoined to take care that night-hags, flying-dragons, mountain-dwarfs, will-o-the-wisps, and other mischievous beings, the existence of which everybody would fain deny, do not lurk in the Academy. As they love to sojourn in marshes, lakes, ditches, and heathes, the vice-president must exert himself to extirpate such malevolent creatures. He will be allowed seven crowns for every monster he may deliver up, dead or alive."—Such were the instructions of a vice-president of the Prussian Academy in 1732! What an enormous distance between the gross superstitions of Frederick-William I, and the philosophical spirit of his son Frederick II!

From the Pennsylvanian.

Between the Lawand the press, the drama is in a very bad way in the Blue State. Barret and company have fallen within the clutches of Mr. Justice Lynch, and the select men of the town of Lowell, for playing the Hunchback in violation of the law against dramatic performances—the Post Master, Mr. Elephalet Case, being the informer. On Wednesday last, Mr. G. H. Barrett and Mr. Andrews, the renowned singer of the "Cobbler of Preston," engaged before the Police Court! They desired to be tried separately, and Mr. Andrews stood forward as the first victim. The difficulty was to identify him—for the witnesses would not swear that the prisoner in the plain garb of a citizen was the man who figured on the boards, in the tinsel and trappings of Modus. He was however ordered to recognize in the sum of $350, to appear at the Court of Common Pleas in November, and in the meantime to keep the peace and be a good boy. Your humble servant was then tried between the promoters of the prosecution and the respondents which resulted in the taving aside of the remaining processes, and the respondents, W. H. Smith, G. H. Barrett &c. were discharged.

One of the witnesses was committed for a contempt, having refused to swear that he was or was at the theatre on the evening aforesaid, although it was decided by Justice Locke, that one of the audience who did not take part in the performances is not participes criminis. The other twenty witnesses could say nothing to the point; they were at the theatre, and they saw some one play Modus. The playbills said it was Mr. Andrews, and that was all they knew about the matter. Some of the actors they did not know, but they saw Mr. Andrews walking about behind the scenes like any other man, and he did not tell them that he was playing Modus. It is therefore a difficult matter to decide who performs a character, especially if the question be asked in a police office.

One witness deposed that he saw the same person who performed Modus, play a part in 1-31 on the Boston boards, when the bills called him Andrews, &c. &c.

The Lowell Mercury takes part against the players; but is willing to have a theatre on certain conditions: provided that minors are excluded unless they come by consent of parents and guardians; that all females unprotected be excluded; and that no liquors be sold in the house. Under these arrangements the editor thinks plays as harmless as conflicts, jigs, or historical lectures. He however growls at the profits of the actors, such as Kendale and Master Burke, which praiseworthy, save the taxes levied upon the poor, and sponged indirectly out of their pockets. The New England managers then must have discovered the grand secret of forcing the people to patronise them modern colens.

Green Spots.—The following method of removing grease and oil spots from silk and other articles, will not injury to the colours, is given in the Journal des Connoissances Uselles: Take the yolk of an egg and put a little of it on the spot, then place over it a piece of white linen, and wet it with boiling water; rub the linen with the hand, and repeat the process three or four times, at each time applying fresh boiling water; the linen is to be then removed, and the part thus treated is to be washed with clean cold water.

Married,

On Tuesday the 20th inst by the Rev. Dr. Philip Milledoler, Prof. of Divinity in Rutgers College, John S. Bussing of the firm of E. & J. Bussing, to Miss Ann, daughter of Abraham Van Ness.

At Jamaica, L. I. on Thursday, August 22, by the Rev. Wm. L. Johnson, Henry Van Rensselar, of Albany, to Elizabeth, daughter of Mr John A King.

At New Haven, on Wednesday the 14th inst, by Silas Mix, Esq. Col George Ward, of the city of New York, to Mrs. Charlotte Tuttle, of the former place.

At Delhi, on the 15th inst by the Rev. Mr Orange Clark, Henry Robinson, son of the Hon. Truex Robinson, of Roxbury, to Elizabeth, daughter of General Erastus Root.

At Norwich, Conn, by the Rev. Mr. Everett, Rev J. M. S. Perry, of Mendon, Mass. to Miss Harriet Joanna Lathrop, youngest daughter of the late Charles Lathrop, Esq.

Died,

At Montrose, Pa on Saturday the 17th inst. at the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr Hoyt, Miss Phebe Hoyt, aged 60 years, sister of her late daughter, Mr. Mary Jane Hoyt, of L. I.

On Friday morning, 16th inst after a short but severe illness, in his third year, Robert, son of R. D. Hopkins of this city.

On Thursday morning, 15th inst, Mr. Thomas Sarah Antonia, consort of L. D. Orchard.

On Thursday morning, Mr Henry Gibson.

THIRD PRIZE BOOK SET.
BY JAMES OGDEN.
Mr Hornsby
Weeks and Lawson, 6 Hanover-sq. aug27

STATE OF NEW-YORK.
SECRETARY'S OFFICE.
Albany, Aug. 20, 1833.
I, Silas Wright, Jun. Comptroller of the State of New-York, do hereby certify that the following gentlemen have been appointed Commissioners of Excise in the several towns in the County of Monroe, viz. Ira Ward, Jun. Jonathan Ward, and Jacob Gardner, Jun. Commissioners of Excise for the town of Rochester, in the County of Monroe, in the place of Jacob Gardner, Jun. deceased, and Jacob Gardner, Jun. Commissioner of Excise for the town of Brighton, in the place of Ira Ward, Jun. resigned.
Notice is also given that the following gentlemen have been appointed Commissioners of Excise in the County of Monroe, viz. Ira Ward, W. H. Johnson, and Jas. S. Gardner. These four vacancies will be open to subscribers until the first of October.
J. M. SLEIGHT, Comptroller.
The Nat. Intelligencer, Washington, Richmond Whig, Pittsburgh Intelligencer, Norfolk Herald, N. Y. Spirit of the Times, Philadelphia Chronicle, Lancaster Intelligencer, Albany Argus, are requested to publish the above once a week till forbid, and charge J. M. Sleight. aug31

THE SCALPING KNIFE, Cooper and Chase, 205 Broadway.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.
THE Proprietor respectfully informs the public that Sunbeet from Paris, the celebrated Professor of EXPERIMENTAL PHILOSOPHY, VENTRILOQUIST, and WONDER-WORKER in general, will have the honor to make his Grand Exhibition in the Saloon of the Garden, on Tuesday Evening, the 27th inst.
Monsie

UNITED STATES TRAVELLING & BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

CARDS.

A. L. DE ROSE,
PORTRAIT PAINTER,
95 Liberty street. a12 1y

JOHN MAGNIN Importer of Watches, Clocks Musical Boxes, Materials and Tools for watch makers, &c. &c. No. 22 Wall street.

G. L. SLOAN & CO. COACH AND CARRIAGE MAKERS, No. 58 First street. july 27

CHARLES ADAMS—Late assistant of Mrs. Floyd—has opened an Eating House at No. 5 William street, near Hanover square.
Meats, Pastry, Coffee, Tea, Boiled Rice, Lamb, &c. at all hours. june 28

GEO. M. K. UNDERHILL, Pocket Book Manufacturer, No. 50 Fulton street, New York.

LEONARD DEVOE, Boot and Shoemaker, 104 Laurens street.

THOMAS GREEN, Draper and Tailor, corner of Prince street and Broadway, New York.

WILLIAM HACKETT, Boot and Shoe Maker, No. 48 Nassau street.

FRANCIS AGER, BROWN JUG TAVERN, an old established English House, 538 Pearl, near Elm street, New York.

LECOUNT & HAMMOND, Map, Chart, and Topographical Engravers, No. 4 Wall street.

T. R. WHITNEY, Engraver, Copper Plate Printer, and Printer in Gold, No 11 Madison street.

BARDOTTE'S Gentlemen's Dressing Rooms, 146 Broadway.

BEEKER & CLARK, Cabinet, Chair and Sofa Warehouse, 55 Broad street, New York.

WILLIAM N. THOMAS, Looking Glass Manufacturer, No. 126 Canal street.

A. ELSTON, fashionable Boot Maker, No. 14 Wall street.

BREWSTER'S Hat Store, 307 Broadway, New York. Hats made to any pattern.

HOOD & REEDER, Drapers and Tailors, 69 Fulton street.

SIMEON HAINES, No. 56 Broad street, Manufacturer of all kinds of Cabinet Furniture.

SHERMAN, Merchant Tailor and Draper, 102 Broad street, corner of Pearl, New York.

W. H. CHAPMAN, Stock and Glove Store, No. 1 Maiden Lane. N. B. French and English Fancy Goods.

CARDS of address, Invitation and Profession, designed and engraved by Geo. W. Tenbner, 410 Pearl street, opposite Vandewater, New York.

DOWNING'S Oyster establishment, No. 5 Broad street. N. B. Sufficient room to accommodate from forty to sixty persons, in separate apartments from the bar.

WILLIAM HUTCHIN'S plain and fancy Dry Goods Store, No. 236, Pearl street, between Oak and Madison streets, New York.

J. CAMPBELL, Looking Glass and Picture Frame and Gilder, No. 164 Fulton street, New York. N. B. Old frames repaired.

J. L. CLARK'S Old Established and Truly Lucky Office, 168 Broadway, New York. Bank notes examined and all Lottery information given gratis. Please call at Clark's!

STINEMETS & BOLEN, Drapers and Tailors, corner of Broad and Wall streets, New York. N. B. Naval and Military uniforms executed in a superior style.

PARSELLS, Manufacturer of very superior Stocks of Silk, Satin, Bombazine, Velvet, &c. &c. 264 Broadway. Parsells would particularly recommend his beautiful article, the Crystal Stock.

A. H. WHEELER'S ROOM FOR WRITING AND BOOK-KEEPING, at No. 251 Broadway.

H. ROWELL & CO. 40 Canal-street, near Broadway, New York, Manufacturer of Paste and Liquid Blacking, of a superior quality, warranted not to injure the Leather, which they offer upon the most liberal terms. 22

GOLD AND SILVER LEAF.—For sale at the manufactory No. 67 Watts st. New-York; also gold, silver, and German bronzes, warranted superior quality, at the lowest prices.
N. B. Dentist's gold, silver and platina, and tin foil of superior quality, will be forwarded by the single sheet or ounce, at the shortest notice and lowest price free of charge, by GEORGE S. WAITE,
67 Watts st. New York.
j19

MAVERICK,
ENGRAVER & PRINTER, will pay the strictest attention to all orders received for Bank Notes, Book Plates, Cards, Seals, &c.
Franklin Office, 85 Liberty st

COAL.—SCHUYLKILL, LEHIGH & LACKAWANNA COAL, of the first quality, for sale at the lowest prices.
JACOB SOUTHART,

CENTRAL HOUSE.—Late Patrot House—by WELDEN & WEBB, 156 Chatham street, up stairs. june 29

ISAAC D. NEAL, Apothecary and Druggist, No. 2 Franklin square, New York. Particular attention paid to Physicians' prescriptions and Family Medicines. Medicine Chests for sea voyages, Plantations, &c.

RICHARD AUGUSTUS, 46 William street, has discovered a composition that speedily prevents the chafing of leather—and a willing to warrant well made Boots (receiving his preparation daily) to wear over six months before the upper leather breaks. The use of it gives a very superior, and entirely supersedes the necessity of blacking.

Boot makers, would be much pleased to explain more particularly to any gentlemen who will do him the favor to call and try the advantages of this discovery.

FOREIGN and American Snuff Store—Fine Havanna Cigars, Cavendish Tobacco, Cigar Cases, Sugar Tubes, Snuff Boxes, Foreign Pipes, Pipe Stems, &c. &c. always on sale at Mrs. G. NEWCOMB'S, 297 1-2 Broadway, between Reed and Duane streets.

BOSTON SCHOOL BOOK DEPOSITORY—CARTER, HENDEE & Co. School Book publishers, Boston, have just published
GREEN'S PHILOSOPHY—Elements of Natural Philosophy, with Practical Exercises for the use of schools By Francis J. Grund.
Extract from the Preface.
The general want of suitable text-book on Natural Philosophy, adapted to young pupils, and at the same time, to the progress of instruction in this country, has for a long time past, been the subject of complaint with many of the most experienced teachers. In the following treatise, the author has endeavored not only to preserve his work from some of the grave errors, with which it is commonly to find elementary treatises on this science charged, but has endeavored also with the most recent discoveries in electricity, galvanism, and magnetism. As regards the general plan and arrangement of the work, it will suffice to say, that the INDUCTIVE METHOD has been pursued as far as it was practicable in a treatise of this nature.
Having thus brought this treatise on Natural Philosophy to the limits, the author intends to have it followed by an elementary treatise on Chemistry, which will be executed on the same plan, and form a necessary sequel to this work. june 29

LONDON HAIR CUTTING.
G. WADE 414 Ez Weil street, having devoted his time to the art of Hair cutting, for the last ten years, flatters himself, that if the fashionable New York will favor him with a trial of his abilities, it will meet a continuance of their favors.
Agent for Gallin's celebrated Dye Powder, by using which, red or Grey Hair is changed to a permanent black. j8

P. O'BRIEN, Tailor, Draper and Clother, No. 153 Centre street. m18.

LOOKING GLASS AND PICTURE FRAME MANUFACTORY, No. 44 Chatham street, New York.—DEL VECCHIO respectfully informs his friends and the public, that he continues manufacturing Looking Glasses and Picture Frames wholesale, retail, and for exportation, and he warrants the articles that he manufactures of a superior quality. His terms will be found liberal.
N. B. Old Looking Glasses newly silvered and old frames regilt. Mch 2

SETH B. SPALDING, Draper and Tailor, No. 21 Broadway.

HYMN BOOKS, &c.—Rippon's selections, Watts and Rippon's Watts's and Watts, with the Tunes and Hymns of Zion. Also, Bibles and Testaments of all sizes and bindings, constantly for sale by BARTLETT & RAYNOR, j8tf 76 Bowery.

TRUSS COMMUNICATION.—The attention of those afflicted with Hernia is called to a new Truss lately patented in the city, and sold at No. 2 Astor street. Its superiority over every other instrument will be evident on a re inspection, for unlike every other truss with which I am acquainted, the rupture pad is pressed upon by a double spring, which is so fixed as to correspond in every necessary point to the lower part of the rupture pad, thus keeping the pad closely applied in every situation of body, and adjusting and adapting itself under all circumstances to the person adapting itself under all circumstances to the person and to the part to which it is to be applied. Possessing a double spring and consequently a double degree of elasticity, it is rendered easy and convenient to the wearer. j22

GOLD AND SILVER LEAF.—For sale at the manufactory No. 67 Watts st. New-York; also gold, silver, and German bronzes, warranted superior quality, at the lowest prices.
N. B. Dentist's gold, silver and platina, and tin foil of superior quality, will be forwarded by the single sheet or ounce, at the shortest notice and lowest price free of charge, by GEORGE S. WAITE,
67 Watts st. New York.
j19

MAVERICK,
ENGRAVER & PRINTER, will pay the strictest attention to all orders received for Bank Notes, Book Plates, Cards, Seals, &c.
Franklin Office, 85 Liberty st

COAL.—SCHUYLKILL, LEHIGH & LACKAWANNA COAL, of the first quality, for sale at the lowest prices to suit purchasers.
JACOB SOUTHART,

CENTRAL HOUSE.—Late Patrot House—by WELDEN & WEBB, 156 Chatham street, up stairs. june 29

ISAAC D. NEAL, Apothecary and Druggist, No. 2 Franklin square, New York. Particular attention paid to Physicians' prescriptions and Family Medicines. Medicine Chests for sea voyages, Plantations, &c.

RICHARD AUGUSTUS, 46 William street, has discovered a composition that speedily prevents the chafing of leather—and a willing to warrant well made Boots (receiving his preparation daily) to wear over six months before the upper leather breaks. The use of it gives a very superior, and entirely supersedes the necessity of blacking.
Boot makers, would be much pleased to explain more particularly to any gentlemen who will do him the favor to call and try the advantages of this discovery.

FOREIGN and American Snuff Store—Fine Havanna Cigars, Cavendish Tobacco, Cigar Cases, Sugar Tubes, Snuff Boxes, Foreign Pipes, Pipe Stems, &c. &c. always on sale at Mrs. G. NEWCOMB'S, 297 1-2 Broadway, between Reed and Duane streets.

BOSTON SCHOOL BOOK DEPOSITORY—CARTER, HENDEE & Co. School Book publishers, Boston, have just published
GREEN'S PHILOSOPHY—Elements of Natural Philosophy, with Practical Exercises for the use of schools By Francis J. Grund.
Extract from the Preface.
The general want of suitable text-book on Natural Philosophy, adapted to young pupils, and at the same time, to the progress of instruction in this country, has for a long time past, been the subject of complaint with many of the most experienced teachers. In the following treatise, the author has endeavored not only to preserve his work from some of the grave errors, with which it is commonly to find elementary treatises on this science charged, but has endeavored also with the most recent discoveries in electricity, galvanism, and magnetism. As regards the general plan and arrangement of the work, it will suffice to say, that the INDUCTIVE METHOD has been pursued as far as it was practicable in a treatise of this nature.
Having thus brought this treatise on Natural Philosophy to the limits, the author intends to have it followed by an elementary treatise on Chemistry, which will be executed on the same plan, and form a necessary sequel to this work. june 29

LONDON HAIR CUTTING.
G. WADE 414 Ez Weil street, having devoted his time to the art of Hair cutting, for the last ten years, flatters himself, that if the fashionable New York will favor him with a trial of his abilities, it will meet a continuance of their favors.
Agent for Gallin's celebrated Dye Powder, by using which, red or Grey Hair is changed to a permanent black. March 2

Popular Houses.

ADELPHI HOTEL,
38 STATE STREET, ALBANY, BY
J. CROSS.
Opposite the Rail Road Stage office, and near the Steam Boat Landing m11

WEBB'S CONGRESS HALL
142 BROADWAY, N Y

☞ The undersigned having opened the above named splendid Hotel in the most central part of the city, begs to assure his friends and the public, that they will always find elegance and comfort combined under his roof, with prompt attention and the utmost accommodation. In returning his thanks to the public for past favors, he can with confidence appeal to their experience of his capability to the Citizens of the Union, for a continuance of their present extensive patronage. C. H WEBB,
Congress Hall, 142 Broadway
j22

NIBLO'S HOTEL,
No. 112 BROADWAY, BETWEEN FINE AND CEDAR streets, New York.

THE subscriber returns his grateful acknowledgements to his friends and the public for the liberal support afforded him since his establishment in this city. Having found, however, that the name of his Hotel, which he originally adopted, Congress Hall, subjects him to many inconveniences in consequence of the proprietor of a public establishment in his immediate vicinity having assumed the same title, and being unwilling by a continuance of the present name of his house, to embarrass his neighbor as well as himself, he has resolved on changing the same to that of NIBLO'S HOTEL, hoping under this new title to merit a continuance of public patronage. No unusual or extraordinary exertions, advantageous to permanent and transient guests than Niblo's Hotel, its central location, being near the principal places of amusement and its vicinity to the public offices and business part of the town, renders it a most desirable resort for families and gentlemen engaged in commercial and other pursuits.
The experience which the subscriber has acquired as proprietor, for many years, of that extensive establishment the EXCHANGE HOTEL, in Petersburg, Virginia and subsequent as an associate with Mr. Hoskins, in the Washington Hotel, Philadelphia, will, he trusts, prove a sufficient guarantee to all who may honor him with their patronage, that nothing shall be wanting on his part, or by those in his employ, to contribute in every respect to their accommodation and comfort. dec 22

CLINTON LUNCH,
Corner of Liberty street and Broadway.
THE proprietors of this establishment, which has been opened since May last, in consequence of the unparalleled support they have received, are induced to come before the public with their best thanks for the liberal patronage bestowed on them, and to assure them that instead of relaxing in their exertions to please, (which is too much the case with many who undertake to conduct similar establishments,) they are stimulated to increased exertions, if possible, and determined to preserve in the same straight forward path in which they have commenced, hoping thereby to deserve a continuance of that support they have hitherto so liberally been favored with. The undersigned being averse to all kinds of common-place puffing, have been determined that this establishment should speak full by its own merits and elements; and as they have now been six months fairly before the public, and that public having continued daily to increase its patronage, they are justified in presuming that the results of their have proved in conducting the establishment has been generally approved, and as a proof of their determination to spare no pains or expense in improving and enhancing the comfort of their patrons in all instances may require, for the public accommodation, they have now to announce that they have, at a very considerable expense, fitted up a handsomely furnished ladies' Dining Room on the first floor, which was opened to the public on the 5th instant, the entrance to which is from No. 73 Liberty street. The proprietors will now be enabled to get up Dinners and Suppers for private parties, of all the delicacies of the season, in a style equal to any establishment in the city, at the shortest notice. Their Wines and Liquors will as usual continue to be chosen from the oldest and most choice stocks in the city, and the personal exertions of the proprietors will be continued, and their best efforts exerted to please and to deserve public patronage. The Ordinary, as usual, will be conducted on the most liberal principles. Hot Coffee and Tea at all hours from 7 in the morning till 12 at night. Oysters of the best quality, in and their varieties, and Soups of every description at all times.
GOOLD & ATKINS.
nov 10

TAMMANY HALL,
Opposite the City Hall, New York.
THIS Establishment has been fitted up in as gaudy a style as any House in this city, and is furnished throughout with a good style, for the accommodation of the public on the following plan.
Gentlemen can take their lodgings by the single night or by the week, as they please without any reference to Board, if he wishes refreshments he can have them at any time he pleases and what he pleases to select from the Bill of Fare, which will hang in the refectory or Bar Room with the prices of every article attached thereto. In the Basement Story is the Refectory, where Refreshments of every kind may be had on the most reasonable terms, and in handsome style at a minutes notice, from 5 in the mornings and 12 o'clock at night. On the 2d Floor is the Bar and Reading Room.
The Lodgings are cool and comfortable being in the most healthy and pleasant part of the city, overlooking the Park and fronting on the City Hall, Broadway and Nassau streets, and can be accommodated on the most reasonable terms. The Bar is stocked with the choicest of Liquors and Wines, and the Larder is furnished with the best the market affords, and no pains or expense will be spared by the proprietors to make this establishment a comfortable retreat for all those who will honor them with their patronage. Price of Lodgings. Per week, $2,00, 3 nights, $1,00, single night 37 1-2 cents. mar 1

CONGRESS HALL,
PARK PLACE, Albany,—By W. LANDON,
(Formerly Crutenden's.)
N. B. A Porter with a wagon, will be in regular attendance to carry baggage to and from the house free of expense. june 1y

COLUMBIAN & NATIONAL HOTELS.
THE NATIONAL HOTEL, occupied by B. Jessup, and the COLUMBIAN HOTEL lately occupied by Philander Robes, with credit to himself and great satisfaction to the public, have been connected for the purpose of furnishing more extensive accommodations and comfort to travellers and boarders. The buildings have been put in excellent repair, and the Parlors, Sitting Rooms and Chambers so arranged as to furnish the greatest comfort and convenience to private families, travellers and boarders. The furniture is new, and in style corresponding with hotels of the first class. The location is in South Market street, opposite the North River Steamboat landing. The subscriber will give his personal attention to the accommodation and comfort of his guests, and will be responsible for the urbanity and fidelity of his servants. He will claim to share of public patronage than his assiduity in business and the convenience of his establishment justly entitle him to. A porter, with a wagon, will be in readiness to convey baggage to and from the steamboats, free of charge. B. JESUP
Albany, june 25.

SOUTHERN AND WESTERN
STAGE OFFICE, LOWELL, Mass.
LOWELL, WORCESTER, HARTFORD & N. YORK
Daily Stages, leave Lowell daily (Sundays excepted) at 7 A M and arrive in Worcester at 11 A M and in New York the 3d day.—Returning, leave Worcester at 1 P M daily, and arrive in Lowell at 4 P M (Sundays excepted.)
LOWELL, BRATTLEBORO AND ALBANY Daily Mail stages, leave Lowell daily (Sundays excepted) at 7 A M. Through to Albany in two days. Fare six dollars. Returning, leaves Baker & Walridge's stage office, Albany, daily, (Sundays excepted) and arrive in Lowell, the 2d day at 11 A M. Through to Albany in one day on Saturdays. Passengers that leave Lowell or Albany on Saturdays will not arrive until Monday, and Lowell and Albany Mail Stages leave on Sundays at Lowell at 6 o'clock P M. Fare to Albany, $6,00. Leave Lowell daily, for Hartford, Newburyport, Dover, Saco, Portland and Augusta.
LOWELL KENNEBUNK, SARATOGA SPRINGS, AND ALBANY Stages leave Lowell daily, at 7 A M and arrive at Saratoga Springs and Albany the 2d day—through by daylight. Returning, leave Saratoga Springs daily, and arrive at Lowell the 3d day at 11 A M.—Passing through Manchester, Chester, Ex Wall, Concord, N H and Augusta to Lowell.
Passengers wishing to get the cars at Lowell, will be called in time for the cars, if an notice is given at the office, or left at the Bar Room of the Washington Hotel, adjoining the office.
THOMAS A STAPLES, Agent.
march 9 Lowell

NEW YORK AND BOSTON STEAMBOAT COMPANY
FOR NEWPORT AND PROVIDENCE.
THE splendid steam boat BENJAMIN FRANKLIN Capt. Thos. Dean, will leave New York and Providence every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, at 5 o'clock, P M and leave Newport the same days at 10 A M.
For further information, apply at the Office No 21 Broad street, or to the Captain on board, at the foot of Courtlandt street. 1y

CIRCULAR CIRCULAR REFRESHMENT SALOON, No. 296 Bowery—E. S. LOWERED, is located at No 296 Bowery and has hitherto no stronger recommendation than the Proprietor's assurance that the Hale chicken, oysters, tea, coffee, or chocolate, or cream toast, or cold ham or tongue, and cakes, cordial or bitter. feb 16

Stages and Steamboats.

FARE REDUCED TO $2 50
NO MONOPOLY ! ! !
PEOPLE'S LINE FOR PHILADELPHIA, AND BALTIMORE.
Via New Brunswick, Princeton and Trenton
The steamboat NEW YORK, Captain J. Vanpelt, leaves Pier No. 2, North River, foot of Morris st. near the battery, daily (Sundays excepted, at 6 o'clock in the morning, for N. Brunswick where passengers will take the splendid Trenton cars and proceed through Princeton to Trenton, from thence take the splendid PHILADELPHIA, and L. Davis, and arrive at Philadelphia early the same afternoon.
FARE REDUCED TO ... $2 50
" To Perth Amboy and N. Brunswick, 1 50
" Prince town, ... 1 00
" Trenton, ... 50
Breakfast on board ... 37 1-2
Passengers by this line will find superior accommodations, the bar and table being equal to the best Hotels.
This line is connected with the Baltimore People's Line, which leaves Philadelphia daily at 6 o'clock, A M, from the same wharf which this Line lands at. Fare $2
For passage, apply on board the boat, Pier No. 2, or to THOMAS WHITFIELD, No. 1 Courtlandt st and at the People's Line Office 31 Washington st. opposite pier No. 2.
All Specie, Goods, Baggage, &c. at the risk of the owners thereof.
WM. B. JAQUES, Agent, for
J. RUESHBA & CO. Proprietors.
P. S. In consequence of a late advertisement of the Amboy Rail Road Company, relative to the protection which the Legislature of New Jersey have granted to the public against impositions that have been practised upon them by the combination of lines to raise the fare between New York and Philadelphia, the proprietors of the People's Line deem it an act of justice towards themselves, as well as for the satisfaction of the public, to state the following undeniable facts.
In the spring of 1829 the Proprietors of the Union Line, and now the principal owners and Directors of the Rail Road Company, entered into a combination with the old Citizens Line, when by having two thirds of the stock of both Companies, the fare was raised to Four Dollars in the Summer and Six Dollars in the Winter, which was effected by their own act, and not by the Proprietors of the People's Line, as unjustly stated by them. And if it is true, that by the first section of their charter, more than Three Dollars cannot be charged, why did the Rail Road Company during the last winter exact Five Dollars as the regular fare between the two cities ? aug3

BOSTON AND PROVIDENCE.
TREMONT MAIL STAGES
Leaves Boston every morning at 5, and Providence at 6 o'clock.
Also, Steam Boat Mail leaves Providence every day, on the arrival of the boats, and arrives in Boston from one to three hours in advance of the principal part of the Stages of the City Line.
For Seats or Extra Coaches in Boston, apply at City Tavern, Brattle street and Washington Coffee House, 158 Washington street. In Providence, at Tremont Hotel and Rhodes, City Coffee House, 236 North Main street, and leaves Troy at 2 o'clock, A M. Stage Office, corner of Market square and South Main street, and to the Agent on board of the Boats on their arrival. All Baggage and Freight is at the risk of the owners thereof. Passengers will be called for if they will please not to pay their stage fare on board the Boats. C. B. WILDER, Agent.
N. B. It will be seen by a reference to advertisements of the city Line of the Chamber Company have broken out with new advertisements, purporting to be that they were running the only Stage from this City to Providence, to connect with the Boats; evidently designed to give the impression in full, that the Tremont Mail Stage Company had been beaten off the route—which had to instead them in the full possession of the whole line, and given them another opportunity to monopolize and impose upon passengers, as has been the custom at all times, when a good wholesome opposition has not kept them within proper bounds.
As they have practised such a course of deception upon us so long, we pay no regard to such foul tongued impositions, or else than to say that we have made very large additions to our former stock, which enables us to run more regular, with much better Stock and Coaches, and in less time, from the Boats, on an average, than any other line on the route. m11

WINTER ARRANGEMENTS
For BOSTON AND PROVIDENCE, VIA NEW LONDON
This steamboat GENERAL JACKSON, Capt. Hoxie, will leave the East River steamboat place foot of Beekman street, on Friday afternoon, at 4 o'clock.
Stage will be in readiness on the arrival of the boat at New London, to convey passengers by the way of Norwich to Providence and Boston. Her regular days of leaving will be from New York on Tuesdays and Fridays; from New London on Mondays and Thursdays; from Norwich on Tuesdays and Fridays. Freight taken at fair prices. For further information inquire of J. SANTON & CO. 114 South street.
JACOB CORLIES & SONS, 252 Pearl st.
Jan 19

WESTERN LINE OF STAGES,
New Arrangement.—Daily, Sundays excepted.
THIS Line of Stages will leave Joseph I Roy's Steam boat Hotel, Jersey City, on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings, at 3 o'clock, by way of Newark, Chatham, Morristown, Stanhopes Pleasant, Stanhope, Newton, Augusta, for Milford and Stroudsburg, Thursdays and Saturdays, by way of Paterson, Pompton, Newfoundland, Hamburgh, Deckertown to Milford. Where the two Lines come in, and run six times a week, through Genoa, Cayuga, Cato, Auburn, Sheridan, Montezuma and thence through Ithaca to Geneva, daily.
Intersecting Lines.—At Newton, this Line intersects a Line of Stages, running from Newburgh, through Easton, to Philadelphia. At Milford, it intersects a Line running three times a week, to Lawson, Penn. At Montrose it intersects a Line of Stages from Owego to Philadelphia, by way of Wilkesbarre, Bethlehem, &c. Also, a Line running to Bainbridge, through Wilkesbarre, Berwick, Northumberland, &c. At Ithaca, a Line leaves Montrose, every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, for Bradford County, Towanda, &c. At Owego, it intersects a Line from Tioga Point, Newtown, Bath, Olean Point, &c. From Tioga Point, Newtown, Bath, Olean Point, &c. From Carbondale, a Line leaves daily, for Blakely, Providence, Pittston, Wilkesbarre, Newport, Berwick, Danville, Northumberland, &c. For seats, apply at the Courtlandt street, or to James Kenney, No. 56 Pearl street, New York, or to Joseph I Roy, Jersey City.
JOSEPH I ROY
SEARL & BURTON,
STOCKTON, STOKES & AVERY,
mar 8 ly Proprietors.

LINE OF OMNIBUSES
From Twelfth street to Wall street
ROSWELL BEACH, has purchased this Line throughout, and having added, as an Extra, the beautiful little carriage "Tom Thumb," has determined to start, alternately every fifteen minutes, following splendid Stages, viz: Brewster's Franklin, Paterson, Veterans, Albion, and Tom Thumb, which are not surpassed in convenience or beauty by any in the city. The horses have been purchased at great cost, and are kept in the best condition to do the work. The fare being now in first rate order, the Proprietor hopes, by the regularity of starting, the excellence of his horses and carriages, and the attention and civility of his drivers, to deserve the patronage of those whose convenience will be promoted by the novel arrangement, and of the citizens of New York generally.
N. B. Complaints have been expressed by the holders of tickets, which were purchased from the home-course on this line, the present Proprietor begs leave to state, that the Gallery Omnibus (the Tom Thumb) is not adapted to take tickets of any other Omnibus, or Tickets which might have been sold by the former Proprietor, or to receive any other than those issued by the subscriber. He hopes the public will not be so unreasonable as to think that he is to be responsible for tickets issued by others, and that he is to be compelled to redeem them himself in order to retain and which if he should redeem, would involve him in an expense greater than the undersigned under any circumstances can possibly afford.
New York, January 1, 1831. Jan 25

NEW LINE OF MAIL COACHES
From Lowell to Worcester, Springfield, Hartford and New Haven.
Leave Lowell daily (Sundays excepted) at 7 A M, passing through Chelmsford, Westford, Ashby, Fitchburg, Leominster, Sterling, Princeton, Rutland, Paxton, Worcester, Spencer, Brookfield, Brimfield, Monson, Palmer, Ware, Belchertown, Amherst, Hadley, Northampton, Southampton, Westfield, Blandford, Granville, Southwick, Feeding Hills, Agawam, Springfield, Longmeadow, East Longmeadow, Wilbraham, Hampden, Somers, Stafford, Tolland, Vernon, Rockville, Hartford, Wethersfield, Newington, Cromwell, Middletown, Durham, Wallingford, Meriden, Cheshire, Wolcott, Bethany, Woodbridge, New Haven, Orange, West Haven, Milford, Stratford, Bridgeport, Fairfield, Southport, Westport, Saugatuck, Norwalk, Fairfield, Stamford, Greenwich, Rye, Mamaroneck, Pelham, Eastchester, Westchester, Morrisania, Harlem, Bloomingdale, Greenwich, Bowery, Chatham, Nassau, Broadway, Chambers, Warren, Chambers, Nassau, Chatham, Bowery, Greenwich, Bloomingdale, Harlem, Morrisania, Westchester, Eastchester, Pelham, Mamaroneck, Rye, Stamford, Greenwich, Fairfield, Norwalk, Saugatuck, Westport, Southport, Fairfield, Bridgeport, Milford, West Haven, Orange, New Haven, Woodbridge, Bethany, Wolcott, Cheshire, Meriden, Wallingford, Durham, Middletown, Cromwell, Newington, Wethersfield, Hartford, Feeding Hills, Southwick, Granville, Blandford, Westfield, Southampton, Northampton, Hadley, Amherst, Belchertown, Ware, Palmer, Monson, Brimfield, Brookfield, Spencer, Worcester, Paxton, Rutland, Princeton, Sterling, Leominster, Fitchburg, Ashby, Westford, Chelmsford, Lowell.
Passengers will be called for if they will please to give notice at the Office, or left at the Bar Room of the Washington Hotel, adjoining the Office.
THOMAS A STAPLES, Agent.
Lowell

WINTER FASHIONS.
DR. T. STURLEVS, 255 Broadway, 2 doors from Pearl st.
ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY Dozen of the Celebrated Stiff Bosoms, Collars and Stocks, Cravats and Stocks, Ladies' Cravats and Stocks, Gentlemen's